Additionally we are at 88.4% mask compliance as of yesterday nationwide. Up from 85% on 10/5 (start of my data pull). If masks worked as they led us to believe then our case level would not be rising at this rate.

So @theatlantic remains the top cheerleader for Team Apocalypse, but at least it has the facts right this time:

#sarscov2 is airborne;
It spreads indoors way more easily than outdoors;
Masks are useless ("don't do much good" = useless)

safer through testing, masking, and limiting the number of attendees, but none of these methods is foolproof. As my colleague Sarah Zhang has written, a negative COVID-19 test is not a "get out of jail free" card; it's unclear how well the tests work on people who aren't feeling sick. Masks don't do much good if people spend several hours together in an unventilated room. And several public-health experts recently told The Washington Post that even small, casual get-togethers are significantly contributing to the spread of the virus.

Of course the takeaway is idiotic.

Real advice: if you have any symptoms, avoid spending time indoors with vulnerable (older) people;

Forget the masks - especially outside;

If you're personally worried (which you shouldn't be unless you're very old/sick) OPEN THE WINDOWS.

BTW - if you wonder why you keep hearing about potential ventilator shortages in NY, one reason is that hospitals are intubating COVID patients who do NOT have symptoms that would usually require intubation "to protect staff." I don't know what that is, but it's not rationing.

From a reader in Oregon whose parents are 92 and 88: “The facility has forbidden my sister from entering... because they are ‘not completely isolated.’”

Lockdowns kill the elderly as surely as Covid, only more slowly and painfully.

Dear Alex,

I look at your twitter feed daily and appreciate everything you are doing to expose the outrageousness of the response to the virus.

My parents are 92 and 88, living in an independent retirement apartment in Medford, OR. My mother has dementia. My father has heart failure. They are in a transitional program between regular medical care and hospice and they are supposed to receive at least monthly visits from the program social worker to check on their level of functioning and assess their needs.

My sister who lives nearby had received special permission to enter their apartment twice weekly to help with organizing and financial matters and to be

Primary

Due to the governor's new freeze, the facility has forbidden my sister from entering because my parents choose to leave the premises on rarer and rarer occasions and are, therefore, "not completely isolated." The facility is now also refusing to allow the transitional hospice social worker in to assess my parents because they claim she is not "medical personnel."

This seems criminal to me. Parity between physical and mental health is the law of the land, isn't it?

I just want people to know what is happening to the

It may be worth noting (though it won't be) that only 10 severe cases of #Covid were found in the trial's 44,000 participants. It would be nice to know how long the average participant was followed to get some sense of a one-year risk ratio for severe disease...

"the long term safety data will have to wait" well that fills me with confidence! I don't understand who would get this if they aren't already old or vulnerable? There is literally no need for over 95% of the population if it truly is this effective.

They have said many times the priority and the first stages will be the most at risk - people like the elderly and healthcare workers. The majority of the population will be much later.

That's the problem with the "follow the science" crowd. What they really mean is follow the science they believe. They refuse to acknowledge there is also science to the contrary on some Covid related things. Would be better to admit that "the science" is divided on Covid.

Smart reader email here about our blinders around #Covid risk and risk in general. Well worth a read.

Hi Alex,

I wonder if you could write about risk perception, how important it is for behavior change, and how incorrect our perceptions can be? It's a powerful predictor of current behavior and whether we change it.

Politicians mandate restrictions around COVID and yet legalize THC. I think it is hard for people to look in the mirror at our own behaviors. According to WHO there have been 1.3 million COVID deaths and there are 3 million alcohol deaths every year. Politicians are not going to get this strict with alcohol policy so why with COVID? Most people would say they have greater risk for COVID and yet might be making high-risk choices around alcohol consumption or THC use

Wow. More than HALF of newly admitted #Covid patients in Miami are "with" and not "from" patients. About those soaring hospitalization numbers...

Miami Herald

CORONAVIRUS

In Miami, a sign of widespread transmission: More non-COVID patients have the virus

BY BEN CONARCK NOVEMBER 18, 2020 12:47 PM

for the novel coronavirus, but more than half of them — 471 — were admitted for other reasons, largely to emergency rooms, without typical COVID-19 symptoms.

Public health experts say it's yet another indicator of increasingly widespread transmission of the virus in Miami-Dade County, as the virus ramps up across the country. Vicky Perez, a nurse and the director of critical care at Jackson North Medical Center, said she's seen it in growing numbers: patients who show up for anything from a car [illegible] of worsening coronavirus metrics for Miami-Dade and South Florida in general. A spokeswoman for Memorial Healthcare System in Broward County said the hospital network was seeing a similar uptick in non-COVID patients showing up at hospitals with the virus.

In Miami, hospitalizations specifically for COVID-19 have been accelerating this week after more than a month of other troubling signs: the number of daily reported cases and percentage of people testing positive has risen sharply Temporarily lol. By which I mean temporarily not lol at all.

Btw I had an NYC school administrator tell me last week the real reason for this is that because of the rules the union negotiated the hybrid model is ruinously expensive.

NYC schools temporarily will close for rising COVID-19 rates

Fun fact: the Danish mask study probably OVERESTIMATES the real-world efficacy of masks because people were given 50 free and pretty high-quality masks to use - and instructed in their use.

Rather it underestimates the potential harms of masks as many of those harms would have been eliminated by proper use and frequent changes.
Almost no one does that in real life.

Btw: the antibody results in both arms of the Danish trial were -identical. The minor difference favoring masks came from PCR tests and clinical diagnoses. So? Antibody tests are inherently neutral - while a maskless person might be more likely to get a PCR swab if he had a cold.

Kudos to @NickKristof for telling the truth to an audience that doesn't want to hear it. Schools MUST be open. Everything else should be too, but if the price for open schools is closed bars (nothing else, just bars), fine.

There are two teams.

Team Reality and Team Apocalypse.

One wants open schools, unrestricted travel, and the freedom to uncover your face in public.

The other wants panic and rules for every part of life, DOWN TO HOW YOU EAT THANKSGIVING DINNER.

Two teams.

Which are you on?

Good for you. Where's your evidence? You are welcome to believe that giving your house to a magic leprechaun will reduce the spread of #Covid as long as you don't make me do the same.

PS Handwashing is a nice idea though there is no good evidence it reduces the spread either...

The reason handwashing is a fine idea is because it truly is a ~0 downside move (unless you make kids wash their hands so much they get rashes). The same can't be said for these other interventions.

We will need to look carefully at the @cdcgov all-cause numbers for the next few weeks too - the problem is that the US now has so many lockdown deaths that all-cause may be high even if there is significant casedemic (testing) overcounting of people who would have died anyway.

Exactly. It's going to be difficult to pull apart Covid vs. Lockdown deaths as Lockdown deaths continue to accelerate. Additionally, overly sensitive PCR tests are likely including lockdown deaths in the covid pool

A student of history laughs or yawns at the infantile excitement over the newest "Radical Transformation." Natural Law always reasserts itself, sometimes with a vengeance. But in the meantime, it's fun to watch the excited babies fight over how to set up the new playground.

Two points here: The outbreak in the Dakotas looks like everywhere else - a sharp rise in hospitalizations for six weeks or so (sometimes slightly longer) followed by a sudden plateau. This pattern follows regardless of population density, time of year, or anything else...

And less hysterical epidemiologists and virologists would do us all a great service if they could figure out EXACTLY why. Does the answer have to do with herd immunity? Behavioral changes (which can happen whether or not they're mandated)? Some odd property of the virus?

The only institutions that are being over run are nursing homes, which are the most vulnerable in many ways. Had the virus not made it passed their pretty heavy infection protocols, what would the impact of covid be ?

Same in Kentucky. Several residents and staff of nursing homes are testing positive and they need more staff to assist in those facilities.

So why is the virus "under control" in New York? Not masks (hi California!). Not lockdowns (plenty of people out these days). Not test trace isolate (lol, 1/2 or more of people won't even answer calls).

Here's a hint. The most likely answer rhymes with "shmerd dimmunity."

> Scott Gottlieb, MD ✓ @ScottGottliebMD · Jul 5
> New York State on 7/4: More testing. Fewer cases uncovered. When the virus is under control, testing doesn't uncover more cases. It's a tool for keeping the epidemic at bay.

This is what happens when an Oxford professor and the editor of a journal called Evidence-Based Medicine tries to post an article that [redacted] doesn't like.

Make no mistake, the information war is here. And the tech giants have the high ground.

This is so stupid. When I went to Baghdad (!) for the Times, experienced reporters told me I'd be surprised how normal life was most of the time. They were right: life was usually normal. People still shopped, drank tea, sent their kids to school.

Even with a car bomb a day.

Abstract

Stringent COVID-19 control measures

nucleic acid screening programme between May 14 and June 1, 2020 in Wuhan. All city residents aged six years or older were eligible and 9,899,828 (92.9%) participated. 3/ 35% of all the asymptomatic positives came from people who'd previously been infected. This does NOT mean they were reinfected - it is a useful proxy for the rate of PCR tests to pick up former positives (the cycle threshold for positives was 37-40)...

4/ Further, NONE of the 300 positive tests produced live virus in cultures. This is the very definition of a casedemic.

Results

There were 10,537,513 eligible people aged ≥5 years as Wuhan (64.1% of the total population). The nucleic acid screening was completed in 19 days (from May 14, 2020 to Jun 1, 2020) and tested a total of 9,899,828 persons from the 10,537,513 eligible people (participation rate, 93.9%). Of the 9,899,828 participants, 9,865,304 had no previous diagnosis of COVID-19, and 34,424 were recovered COVID-19 patients.

The screening of the 9,865,304 participants without a history of COVID-19 found 300 newly confirmed COVID-19 cases, and identified 300 asymptomatic positive cases with a detection rate of 0.303 [95% CI, 0.270-0.339]/10,000. The median age-standardized Ct values of the asymptomatic cases were shown in Supplementary Table 1. Of the 300 asymptomatic positive cases, two cases came from one family and another two were from another family. There were no previously confirmed COVID-19 patients in these two families. A total of 1174 close contacts of the asymptomatic positive cases were traced, and they all tested negative for the COVID-19. There were 34,424 previously recovered COVID-19 cases who participated in the screening. Of the 34,424 participants with a history of COVID-19, 805 tested positive again, giving a repositive rate of 0.34% [95% CI, 0.423–0.574].

Virus cultures were negative for all asymptomatic positive and repositive cases, indicating no "viable virus" in positive cases detected in the study.

Look, I know we are all (rightly) concerned about data from China, but it can be possible both that one group of scientists and the central government are hiding the origins of the virus and another group is working hard to slow the spread.

THIS IS INCORRECT. However, a substantial portion of reported #Covid deaths - 25% to 40% - are primarily non-respiratory/CV - mainly Alzheimer's and dementia - and I suspect that percentage is rising.

Yep. This is how you get to herd immunity. At 4x positives the state is at 40%, probably very close. Hospitalizations are now falling in North Dakota and the state has had 834 #Covid deaths, 539 in people over 80 and 21 in people under 50.

> Sean T at RCP @SeanTrende
> This is insane. The population of North Dakota is 762k, and it has had 70,016 total diagnoses (infections are likely much higher). That's nearly 10% of the population diagnosed with COVID. 10 days ago that # was 56k, 20 days ago was 43k, 30 days was 34k. It's getting worse.

From a reader who has tracked daily Florida hospital/ICU bed data for months. I have checked it myself enough to vouch for it. Of note, since late May Florida has had NO overall decline in ICU/general hospital bed capacity. POSITIVE TESTS HAVE SPIKED. NOTHING ELSE. @ohnoessley Live look at the five states with the most #SARSCoV2 cases. Two of these, total population 28 million, have 48,000 #covid deaths. Two others, population 50 million, have 7,500 deaths. (True story.) Can you guess which two the media love? Or which two have Republican governors?

Arizona, Houston, Central Florida: past peak. Los Angeles: probably at or just past peak.

Deaths lag but it looks like the Sunbelt spike has topped out without hospital overrun or even severe strain (aside from a couple isolated hospitals). And far fewer deaths than wave one.

Fun fact from the @cdcgpv surveillance data: of 4,000 #COVID hospitalizations for which they provide detailed age data, 29 were in people under 18. That's not deaths or ICU visits - that's hospitalizations. The closing of the schools is nearly criminal at this point.

Kawasaki disease (KD), also known as Kawasaki syndrome, is an acute febrile illness of unknown etiology that primarily affects children younger than 5 years of age. The disease was first described in Japan by Tomisaku Kawasaki in 1967, and the first cases outside of Japan were reported in Hawaii in 1976.

Clinical signs include fever, rash, swelling of the hands and feet, irritation and redness of the whites of the eyes, swollen lymph glands in the

The refusal to let go of "social distancing" rules despite abundant evidence it's useless in stopping transmission makes it clear this is being used to set a precedent that people shall no longer be permitted to gather in large numbers.

Someone out there doesn't like crowds.

Answers to common questions about how schools are operating under restrictions due to the COVID-19 epidemic. Updated May 5th, 2020.

See also:

schools can then continue as normal, as neither the number of people nor the distance rules will apply to children of kindergarten and primary school age. This also applies to the leisure activities of children of kindergarten and primary school age, e.g. sports, youth and leisure activities and music education.

Students in upper secondary schools and universities may resume attending class in their school buildings, but there are limits to the number of people; no more than 50 individuals may be in the same area in those schools, and caution must be taken to maintain the 2-metre distance between individuals.

If the lockdown state school restrictions continue into next year, the US will be at a large and increasing gap in international education; it is ironic but probably not coincidental that big cities with troubled school systems may be hardest hit.

Wow. @nature published a paper claiming that lockdowns cut the spread of #COVID-19 by hundreds of millions of cases. The @Washingtonpost (inevitably) lapped it up. A look at the paper reveals it is more full of holes than the mask I have (not) worn all week. Let's discuss...

The @imperialcollege paper that @nature published today - the one claiming lockdowns saved 3 million lives in Europe - is a joke too. Three big clues (not including the fact it's from Imperial College and has Professor Pecker as a coauthor, which is dispositive by itself):

1/ They don't disclose the infection fatality rate they're using (it is over 1%, though - it has to be since they project 720,000 deaths in France, which has 67 million people). That's 4x the best estimate from ...

2/ They estimate the lockdown reduced deaths in Sweden by 90% - though, say it with me, SWEDEN DID NOT HAVE A LOCKDOWN...

13 86 505

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 8 juin

3/ To make the numbers work, they theorize transmissibility falls IMMEDIATELY by as much as 80% ON THE DAY LOCKDOWN is imposed (not before, not after, that day) - but then, weirdly, starts to rise again before tapering off. So infections look like this everywhere, even Sweden...

Fun times in Shanghai. This is one way to slow the spread of #sarscov2, the virus with a (roughly) 99.7-99.8% survival rate.

I'd say welcome to the occupation, but it's China, the occupation's been a place for a while.

2/ France, Italy, and the UK now have significantly more deaths per-capita than Sweden (Spain always did). Per-capita positive tests have also been MUCH lower in Sweden than (for example) France this fall. And although we can't be sure yet, ICU admits in Sweden may have peaked.

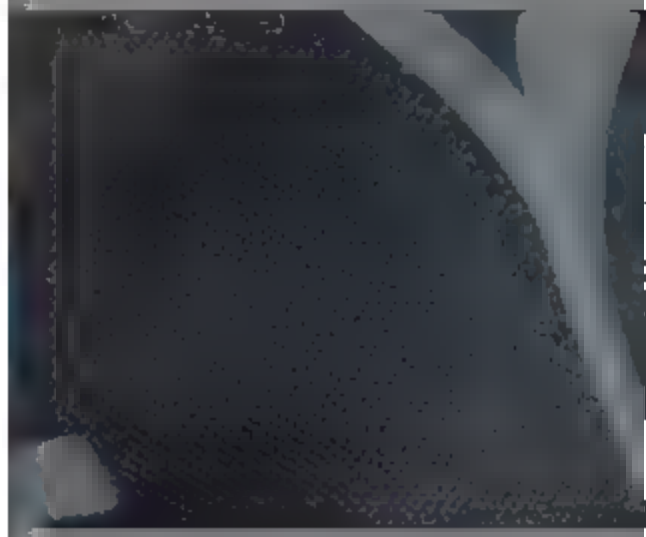
"In some ways, lockdown didn't feel very different for me..." How completely insanely out of touch must you be to say that out loud?

end of April. We spent the summer in North Salem in Westchester County, N.Y. I breed horses there. In some ways, lockdown didn't feel very different for me. We were lucky to be spending time outside. Other than trips to the grocery store, we usually kept to ourselves. When the pandemic started to clear up, Jasper, my 6-year-old, and I returned to our apartment on the Upper East Side of Manhattan.



What made you return?
Jasper is in school five days a week. He needs to live life. He Lol “work reasonably well” - the abstract says “many” materials blocked 1/2 of particles around 2 microns (which means they ALLOWED 1/2 of particles in that size range, and even more smaller particles). Since the great majority of particles in breath are smaller than 1 micron...

No evidence of this and one can argue the counter - blocking large particles means you are more likely to be infected with small particles deep in the lungs. Not saying it's true (though it's true for anthrax), but it's at least as plausible.

Because N95s are so easy to wear people will GLADLY wear them 12 hours a day.

Also cost-effective. At $2.50 a mask (good luck finding them for that price), American adults would spend $4 billion a week to make Scott happy.

Just to be clear - this doesn't say 5G causes Covid or Bill Gates is Satan (although frankly, it wouldn't be @Amazon's business if it did). But censoring me for saying masks don't/haven't been shown to work is a quarter-step from censoring me for saying schools should be open).

It does mean that antibody tests are now likely UNDERESTIMATING the number of people who have been exposed to the virus and recovered not just in New York but anywhere with lots of community transmission. In other words we are closer to herd immunity than we think.

This is exactly what I have been thinking. I swear I had covid last December/Jan (the worst respiratory virus I have ever had, no taste/smell for weeks, took me 4-6weeks to recover) but my antibody test said I was negative. Now I see that is normal after a certain timeframe.

Holy moly, Batman. This study out of Japan (where testing is uncommon) suggests the real infection rate there is 400 to 800 times (!) the reported rate (and, like many European cities, Kobe, Japan had a 3% antibody rate by early April). medrxiv.org/content/10.110 ..

In turn, this raises real questions about whether some of the apparent gap between Japan and Europe is real or an artifact of media/government reporting (look for an epidemic in nursing homes, you find one; don't and you don't?). Very hard to know.

Saddest part is that [illegible] is generally a good reporter. And ~13,000 hospitalizations would be a big number - almost as many as NY at the peak. But the media is so in love with the disaster narrative, so ready to believe the worst, that that figure raises no eyebrows.

Miami - the epicenter of the Florida epidemic - is clearly rolling now too, with hospitalizations down ~20% since the July peak. Of note, Miami-Dade County has 2.7 million people; last month it averaged three #Covid deaths a day in people under 60.

BTW: not that anyone needs to trash the idiotic Sturgis study any further - it has been weighed in the balance and found wanting - but it's worth noting no medical journal would touch it. It was posted on the website of the "Institute of Labor Economics."

A well sourced booklet
This is a short but devastating takedown of the usefulness of masks and should be required reading for every politician in the country. They should have to rebut every point in the book before they can implement a mask mandate.

Apple's kind of a weird company in all this. I think they deeply buy into the mainstream COVID narrative. Even though they run a chain of high revenue retail stores, they've been cautious to the extreme. But they've also sold record numbers of Macs/iPads due to work from home.

Universal Masking in Hospitals in the Covid-19 Era

Article

Hospitals are scrambling to intensify their measures for protecting patients and health care workers from the virus. An increasing number of frontline providers are wondering whether this effort should include universal use of masks by all health care workers. Universal masking is already standard practice in Hong Kong, Singapore, and other parts of Asia and has recently been adopted by a handful of U.S. hospitals.

We know that wearing a mask outside health care facilities offers little, if any, protection from infection. Public health authorities define a significant exposure to Covid-19 as face-to-face contact within 6 feet with a patient with symptomatic Covid-19 that is sustained for a

A good and clear explanation of death certificate matching from Michigan:

MDHHS issues statement about COVID-19 death data

Additional statistics added to today's update

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
April 16, 2020
Contact: Lynn Sutfin, 517-241-2112

LANSING, MICH. The Michigan Department of Health and Human Services (MDHHS) released the following statement about today's update of COVID-19 death statistics.

Maintained in the state's Vital Records reporting system. As a part of this process, individuals who died with COVID-19 infection as a contributing factor to death are compared against all laboratory confirmed cases of COVID-19 in the Michigan Disease Surveillance System (MDSS). If a death certificate is matched to a confirmed COVID-19 case and that record in the MDSS does not indicate a death, the MDSS record is updated to indicate the death and the appropriate local health department is notified.

These matches deaths are then included with mortality information posted to Michigan.gov/coronavirus. On April 10, this process added [illegible] deaths. As a result of this rocess, records that identify C as a contributing factor to de ed against all laboratory confi

COVID-19 in the Michigan Dis ance System (MDSS). If a death te is matched to a confirmed that record in the MDSS doe a death, the MDSS record is u ate the death and the appropr lepartment is notified.

The Milwaukee coroner says about 20 percent of #COVID deaths in his county are misclassified and not due to the virus (not sure if this includes death certificate matching, which typically happens at the state level). 20 percent is likely the minimum.

If public health experts wanted to be honest about masks, they'd say:

We'd like you to wear a mask inside. We think it's neighborly. It won't protect you, but we hope - on the basis of very marginal evidence - it might slow transmission a little.

That's not what they're saying.

A lawyer raises the question of whether efforts to limit private at-home gatherings are per se unconstitutional based on the Due Process clause and the Supreme Court's famous 2003 decision outlawing Texas's sodomy law. Very interested in what other lawyers think:

I'm a lawyer, but I don't want any credit or attribution for the following (which someone else may already have raised, as it should be pretty obvious to any lawyer who litigates constitutional issues, as I do):

I don't believe any of these bans on in-home gatherings can survive in light of the United States Supreme Court's decision in Lawrence v. Texas, 539 U.S. 558 (2003). In Lawrence, the Court struck down laws criminalizing private homosexual sodomy as violative of the 14th Amendment's Due Process Clause. The opinion, written by Justice Kennedy opens as follows:

> Liberty protects the person from unwarranted government intrusions into a dwelling or other

Holy moly, Batman. This study out of Japan (where testing is uncommon) suggests the real infection rate there is 400 to 800 times (!) the reported rate (and, like many European cities, Kobe, Japan had a 3% antibody rate by early April). medrxiv.org/content/10.110 …

In turn, this raises real questions about whether some of the apparent gap between Japan and Europe is real or an artifact of media/government reporting (look for an epidemic in nursing homes, you find one; don't and you don't?). Very hard to know.

Holy moly, Batman. This study out of Japan (where testing is uncommon) suggests the real infection rate there is 400 to 800 times (!) the reported rate (and, like many European cities, Kobe, Japan had a 3% antibody rate by early April). medrxiv.org/content/10.110 …

In turn, this raises real questions about whether some of the apparent gap between Japan and Europe is real or an artifact of media/government reporting (look for an epidemic in nursing homes, you find one; don't and you don't?). Very hard to know.

It's just like the flu, bro. Ask @CDCgov TBH I'm surprised they went there, but so be it. (Odds this page survives the night? Un-high.)

> According to the latest CDC COVIDView report, increases in hospitalization rates for COVID-19, which are cumulative, have started to level off. The hospitalization rate is highest among adults 65 and older and similar to what has been seen during a comparable time period during a recent high severity flu season: https://bit.ly/2ViFfIZ

Fun fact from the @cdcgpv surveillance data: of 4,000 #COVID hospitalizations for which they provide detailed age data, 29 were in people under 18. That's not deaths or ICU visits - that's hospitalizations. The closing of the schools is nearly criminal at this point.

On Memorial Day, we recall our war dead. A good time to remind everyone:

In March, governors and health officials took our freedom by exaggerating the risks of #SarsCov2.

Now they want to trade it back for masks and contact tracing and made-up rules.

No. Never.

1/ This is quite the paper on masks, published in @BMJ_Open in 2015: a randomized trial (the gold standard, yadda yadda) of 1600 health-care workers showed those wearing masks were 6 times (!) as likely to have flu-like illnesses as those in the control group after 4 weeks...

Good morning. @fairfieldU - 6,000 students - is going to require random #SARSCoV2 testing for students, including some who live off-campus. Does HIPAA even allow this invasion of privacy? Imagine if they tried this for STis (which are probably more dangerous in this age range).

Dear Students:

As Fairfield University plans to Bring its Stags Home for the fall 2020 semester, a safe return to campus life is our most important priority. We want to make sure our community members have all the information they need to maintain the vibrancy of our campus life but do so as safety as possible.

Staying Safe: In order to keep our community safe, there will be several new requirements and expectations within our community.

People cast votes for lots of reasons. But I will say: if you want the pandemic to go on forever, Joe Biden's your guy.

It's obvious now: the response to the pandemic IS the pandemic. We can be Sweden and get on with life, or Australia and pretend it's an emergency. Your call.

So you would like to see all those things open up?
With the social distancing that has been in place less than a month, over 30,000 people have died.
What do you think that number will be if we open all of these things? Are you okay with half a million or more deaths?

Abstract

where and how SARS-CoV-2 is transmitted. Methods: Case reports were extracted from the local Municipal Health Commissions of 320 prefectural cities (municipalities) in China, not including Hubei province, between 4 January and 11 February 2020. We identified all outbreaks involving three or more cases and reviewed the major characteristics of the enclosed spaces in which the outbreaks were reported and associated indoor environmental issues. Results: Three hundred and eighteen outbreaks with three or more cases were identified, involving 1245 confirmed cases in 120 prefectural cities. We divided the venues in which the outbreaks occurred into six categories: homes, transport, food, entertainment, shopping, and miscellaneous. Among the identified outbreaks, 53.8% involved three cases, the thing that makes it worse is the media including newspapers won't put the demographics of deaths. Cases are basically useless if you don't know what happens. As of this a.m. from GA DOH:

Holy moly, Batman. This study out of Japan (where testing is uncommon) suggests the real infection rate there is 400 to 800 times (!) the reported rate (and, like many European cities, Kobe, Japan had a 3% antibody rate by early April). medrxiv.org/content/10.110 ..

In turn, this raises real questions about whether some of the apparent gap between Japan and Europe is real or an artifact of media/government reporting (look for an epidemic in nursing homes, you find one; don't and you don't?). Very hard to know.

17 & under 1 death since March
18-39 = 107
40-59 = 529

I assumed this was a joke, but it's real: if you Google "socialism and racism," the top result you're offered will be "capitalism and racism." Big Tech gets more openly ideological by the day. And weird that one of the world's most profitable companies hates capitalism so much.

Wondering what @cdcgov really thinks about masks? Their guidance on quarantining after exposure to someone with #covid explicitly states whether the infected OR exposed person wore masks doesn't matter.

My mask protects no one. So does yours. Thanks for clearing that up, CDC!

The kind of insane reporting that is driving the panic: Arizona didn't reduce its request for ventilators because the stockpile is "dwindling" (remember, California just sent back 500 ventilators!) - it reduced its request because IT WON'T NEED THEM.

GLENDALE, Ariz (AP) — With little hope of getting the 5,000 ventilators it requested from the dwindling national stockpile, Arizona has revised its request down to fewer than the 500 it expects to need soon to treat coronavirus patients, the state's health director said.

Most of the ventilators would be used to equip a Phoenix hospital that shut down last year but is being reopened as an acute care facility, Health Services Department Director Dr. Cara Christ said in an interview. About 50 would be sent to the Navajo Nation, where a severe

This is the organization that governments worldwide are allowing to lead the response to #COVID, and it just more or less admitted it made up the (bizarre) idea that #SARSCoV2 is so different than other viruses that the standard human immune response might be meaningless.

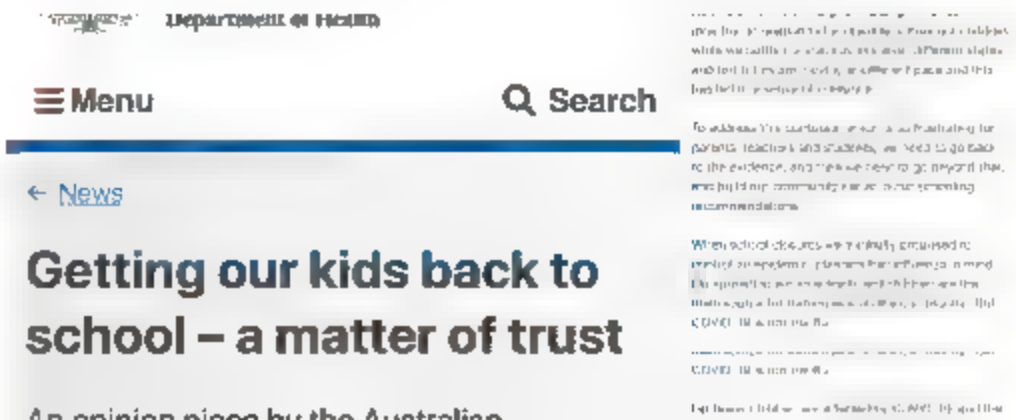
I can't believe I'm writing this, but I have to: @ScottGottliebMD - former head of @fdagov - is either misinformed or simply misleading people about #COVID and children. We DO have data showing children are not important vectors (and are also at ~0 risk of death from the virus).



Squawk Box @SquawkCNBC
"There's a lot of good data showing the scope of a flu epidemic goes down dramatically when you close the schools because the kids become the vectors inside the community," says @ScottGottliebMD. "We assume…

From a summer school session in California: 200 students for six weeks, zero cases among any students or staff. It would be an anecdote except it matches practically all the data.

KEEP SCHOOLS CLOSED FOREVER! The little fools will figure it all out sooner or later.

Primary

Please keep this anonymous.

We just concluded a summer session in a County on California's watch list. 200 students for 6 weeks, State guidance allowed this until the governor's order on Friday.

Zero cases among students, faculty, or staff. We wore masks and spaced things out.

Closing schools is not scientific. It also harms students, very alarmingly our teachers found that the incoming remedial cohort is much further behind the remedial cohorts of previous years.

And here's @cdcgov warning ordinary (non-N95) masks will do nothing to protect you against wildfire smoke because "they do not catch small particles."

Fun fact: smoke particles are far larger than #SARSCoV2.

Your mask protects... well, no one.

CDC
Cloth masks that are used to slow the spread of COVID-19 offer little protection against wildfire

I didn't say it should be censored. I said it's wrong. The answer to factually incorrect speech is more speech.

The CNNs of the world love mistakes like this because they make those of us fighting for the truth easier to dismiss. I'm not wasting time defending it.

Here's the CDC data. All-cause mortality in 2020 is 13% above expected (12% doesn't account for the reporting lag). There will be 350,000+ excess deaths this year. Many of those are lockdown deaths (including some fraction of those counted as COVID)...

Thanks for checking in. Same as always, no names please.

We've had a "surge", going from around 5-6 patients about a month ago to 25-30 patients today (so to borrow from the media, we've had a 500% increase!!). More importantly, we feel even better than ever that we can handle any of these little mini surges, just like we do every winter. People need to remember that we are used to being 100% full in our ICUs and ERs this time of year, so this feels pretty normal.

1/ It's important to understand why pieces like the Johns Hopkins article and the @cdcgov "6%" report have such traction. They're wrong - the excess deaths are real, and a majority are #Covid-related - but they are speaking to a deeper truth...

Can we just drop this idiocy about excess deaths? Here's the rolling @cdcgov 12-month data through June. You can clearly see deaths start to rise in March; by June they cross 3 million. Now they're closer to 3.2.

Yeah, sorry, this is not a complete statistical analysis of the situation, not even close. The whole point of Dr. Briand's analysis was to look deeper at the numbers. Pointing to the CDC website does not contradict that analysis.

And here's updated Florida data (remember, Florida just went on a relatively loose lockdown, no way it could be having an impact yet): 2000 FEWER patients and 200 FEWER ICU patients than yesterday. You read that right. Florida hospitals are emptier today.

Florida is the third largest state in the US, huge elderly population, remember those spring break pictures? The nasty NYC outbreak increasingly appears entirely disconnected from what's happening almost everywhere else in the US.

1/ Morning folks. Wondering why @CDCgov is using such aggressive rules for death counts? Look - there's considerable evidence #COVID infections have peaked in the US. Even the POTUS comments last night warning about this being the "toughest week" suggest as much (deaths lag)...

2/ And the emerging data out of Florida, Southern California, etc suggest that this virus - like most respiratory viruses - doesn't do well when the weather warms and UV rays get stronger. Great news! Right? Right? Well... we're at under 9,000 deaths now.

3/ Suppose the president is right. And this is the "toughest week." And we average 1,500 deaths a day. That gets us to almost 20,000 deaths by April 12. By then the trend should clearly be down, I don't think it will be arguable...

4/ 20,000 deaths, with perhaps that many more coming over the next month (deaths lag). That's terrible! Yeah. It is. But [illegible] is estimating 24,000-63,000 flu deaths this year.

1/ I try to analyze dispassionately. But I will admit I am ANGRY about the way we have largely ignored the massive harm lockdowns and school closings have on kids. Remember: anyone under 30 is at almost ZERO risk here (there are always outliers; planes crash but flying is safe).

2/ Children, more than anyone else, suffer immediately from the lockdowns. They're denied school. They're denied normal socializing with their friends. In many places they have even - bizarrely - been denied the chance to play outside.

40 183 1,0m

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 10 d'abr.

3/ The stress even on healthy families is incredible. And for children in troubled families, the cost is far higher; for those kids, schools may well be the only chance they have to be seen every day by an adult who is not high or abusive.

14 175 995

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 10 d'abr.

4/ Of all the choices we've made, sacrificing the mental health of children at zero risk from this illness is the LEAST acceptable. But so many in the media are young and don't have children, or perhaps are married couples with one child (an equation that makes care easier).

So you would like to see all those things open up?
With the social distancing that has been in place less than a month, over 30,000 people have died.
What do you think that number will be if we open all of these things? Are you okay with half a million or more deaths?

Never forget this. The headlines that say "Coronavirus devastates economy" are a LIE. The lockdowns are what devastated the economy, and those were a choice - a choice not every nation made.

So you would like to see all those things open up?
With the social distancing that has been in place less than a month, over 30,000 people have died.
What do you think that number will be if we open all of these things? Are you okay with half a million or more deaths?

The @stanford antibody testing is out - it estimates ~3% of people in Santa Clara County (CA) have been infected and recovered, 50-plus times the estimate of confirmed active cases. More evidence #SARSCoV2 is far more widespread and thus less dangerous than expected.

without seroprevalence data to inform epidemic parameters. We measured the seroprevalence of antibodies to SARS-CoV-2 in Santa Clara County. Methods On 4/3-4/4, 2020, we tested county residents for antibodies to SARS-CoV-2 using a lateral flow immunoassay. Participants were recruited using Facebook ads targeting a representative sample of the county by demographic and geographic characteristics. We report the prevalence of antibodies to SARS-CoV-2 in a sample of 3,330 people, adjusting for zip code, sex, and race/ethnicity. We also adjust for test performance characteristics using 3 different estimates: i) the test manufacturer's claims, ii) a sample of 37 positives and 30 negatives controls tested at Stanford, and iii) a pooled weighted of both. Results The unadjusted prevalence of IgG antibodies to SARS-CoV-2 in Santa Clara [illegible] The population prevalence of SARS-CoV-2 antibodies in Santa Clara County implies that the infection is much more widespread than indicated by the number of confirmed cases. Population prevalence estimates can now be used to calibrate epidemic and mortality projections.

Holy moly, Batman. This study out of Japan (where testing is uncommon) suggests the real infection rate there is 400 to 800 times (!) the reported rate (and, like many European cities, Kobe, Japan had a 3% antibody rate by early April). medrxiv.org/content/10.110 …

In turn, this raises real questions about whether some of the apparent gap between Japan and Europe is real or an artifact of media/government reporting (look for an epidemic in nursing homes, you find one; don't and you don't?). Very hard to know.

Holy moly, Batman. This study out of Japan (where testing is uncommon) suggests the real infection rate there is 400 to 800 times (!) the reported rate (and, like many European cities, Kobe, Japan had a 3% antibody rate by early April). medrxiv.org/content/10.110 …

In turn, this raises real questions about whether some of the apparent gap between Japan and Europe is real or an artifact of media/government reporting (look for an epidemic in nursing homes, you find one; don't and you don't?). Very hard to know.

Fun fact from the @cdcgpv surveillance data: of 4,000 #COVID hospitalizations for which they provide detailed age data, 29 were in people under 18. That's not deaths or ICU visits - that's hospitalizations. The closing of the schools is nearly criminal at this point.

From a prominent US physician/scientist, whose institution won't even disclose how many (few) #COVID deaths it has, and who notes that even some cancer surgeries (!) are now classified as elective:

I am writing you to thank you for your twitter posts. You are a sane voice in an insane world.

As background, I am a pr[illegible]elf-know physician/scientist ( to list of one of the etc etc--google will verify). My father was also a Holocaust survivor, which perhaps influences my thinking.

The lack of science behind the world's response to the virus is the most frightening thing I have seen in my lifetime. We have given up all of our constitutional rights and for all intents and purposes live in one of the most restrictive police states in the history of mankind. We can't go outside, our children can't have play dates, we cannot protest etc. This is not about a virus--and it's certainly not based on a scientific assessment of the data about the way meant to mislead the masses. And the vast majority of my physician colleagues believe the fearmongering and think we should stay locked up forever. I cannot believe the rapidity of the mass brainwashing.

I work at [illegible] and as of today there have been 10 total deaths with covid (I am not even sure they are because of covid)--in the entire health system over the entire almost 7 weeks we have been locked up. But that is a "secret" and we are not allowed to share the daily dashboard on social media.

Many cancer surgeries have become "elective," chemotherapy is postponed, physicians are forced to make up new treatment plans for cancer patients that have no basis in evidence, and clinical trials and research have been shut down. It would be a great surprise if the impact on the

Let's be clear: the fact the nursing home deaths are not front and center every day in elite media coverage of #COVID tells you everything you need to know about the media's priority - which is instilling panic (and punishing @realDonaldTrump), not driving good health policy.

$1 trillion? I think at least $1 quadrillion! Because masks work. Which is why the near-universal indoor use this fall has made so much difference. Also, what's a micron?

Another major finding that #Sars-Cov-2 was with us long before we decided to panic over it.

@CDCgov scientists report 2% of blood donors on the West Coast in December 2019 had antibodies. Remember how the hospitals were overrun last year?

Yeah, me too.

1/ So [redacted] of the Covid Tracking Project - last seen projecting 550,000 deaths from the Sunbelt spike (he was only off by a factor of 10 or so) - is now calling for "quite a few days of more than 3k deaths reported."

He has a chart, too.

DELETED AND CORRECTED PREVIOUS TWEET. @Neeratanden has repeatedly discussed having long-haul Covid but she did not say she had it for 199 days straight - that figure came in a reply to her tweet. My mistake. My original tweet below, along with her actual October post.

Hey, remember when @neeratanden was sick for 199 days straight with "long-haul Covid"? I'm so glad she's recovered enough since @joebiden won to take one of the most demanding jobs in the federal government! Her return to good health is an inspiration to us all.

Just to say this - every case is different but when I had Covid, I never had a fever and my oxygen was always fine, and I was wiped out for 6 weeks.

How COVID ruined my life

stefanie bernstein

38 minutes ago Details

Hi Alex,

My name is Stefanie Bernstein, I am a 30 year old living in Philadelphia. Back in July I lost my job because my former company made huge cuts due to everyone working from home. They paid me a nice severance package that will be ending in a week, I will also be losing my health insurance. I have now been rejected from every single job I have applied for

Thank you Alex. Thank you for being one of the few voices not afraid to speak the truth on the atrocities being committed on a daily basis by governments. I will (likely) stand for the rights but also see that the dissent of populists is too amplified on social media, but no one in real life really does it any more. There are a few, but for the most part people seem to be FED UP!

This is in reference to the [illegible] paper showing lots of [illegible] in the US in December 2019... which follows the Italian paper showing lots of [illegible] in Italy in fall 2019... which both raise the question if it's the virus or our response to it that caused a global crisis.

I think it's a mix of both. It's obviously more catastrophic to the elderly - esp. those in LTCs. Once it hit those communities, there was an increase in hospital capacity - which I am sure sounded alarms... those ventilators were a huge mistake.

"How COVID ruined my life" - from a son who lost his father to a heart attack after "elective" surgery was postponed.

Alex,

My 72 year old father dropped dead at home in Kentucky on March 30 from a heart attack. He was originally slated for life-saving heart surgery on March 18, but due to the Governor's executive order canceling "elective" surgeries, his doctors put a hold on the procedure. The day he died, he had walked out to the garage to look at something, and my mom later found him on the ground. Meanwhile, the hospital in Louisville where he was to have the surgery was empty. He left behind children and grandchildren and lots of friends, all of us shocked by the suddenness of it all. Even my five year old daughter tells me regularly that she misses him.

I no longer live in Kentucky, and got the call from my sister a few minutes after my Mom found my Dad [redacted] is being sued by a group of doctors for just this reason. They have so many stories of how "elective procedures" that were canceled resulted in death. The shortsightedness by the lockdown believers is pretty impressive.

Thanks for responding! Now for the far more politically sensitive question: Does the fact we haven't found a host make the lab accident/gain-of-function theory more likely/worthy of discussion and investigation?

Btw: I've sometimes wondered why people prefer the physical booklet at twice the price of the ebook - and it's not as if the production quality is high. But Scott explains it - in a world of tech censorship, having a real paper copy is deeply comforting.

I'm surprised you're surprised - why? Just look at zoonoses of the past - how long did it take us to find reservoirs/intermediate hosts for the vast majority of these? Years, if not decades. HIV? Lassa? OC43? HKU1? Ebola? HepC?

It took ~six months for the original SARS. A) We have that as a model; B) The animal host (if one exists) comes from a very limited subset of animals and locations; C) Given the importance of the question why wouldn't China have already put huge resources into finding the answer?

SARS is an outlier and we were very lucky since it was widespread in multiple intermediate hosts - n=1. Who's to say SARS2 even has an intermediate host? Why do you think China hasn't already put huge resources into finding the intermediate host? I'm pretty sure they have.

I think we're stuck in an infinite loop... I'd ask this, though: where is the evidence for an animal host? Not a flat statement that there MUST have been an animal host, but actual evidence? Is it in the sequence of the virus itself? Because as far as I can see it's nowhere else.

1/ Easy way to think about lockdowns and the importance of the models: if we are going to take a step this harmful, we can only do so for one of two reasons:

1) A catastrophe happening NOW.
2) A catastrophe likely to happen in the near future - with a high degree of certainty.

2/ Outside of NYC, there is NO health-system catastrophe now. This is inarguable.

Which leaves the potential future catastrophe. Which means we are relying on these projections. But the projections have failed badly in the last two weeks. So why are we relying on them?

Saddest part is that [redacted] is generally a good reporter. And ~13,000 hospitalizations would be a big number - almost as many as NY at the peak. But the media is so in love with the disaster narrative, so ready to believe the worst, that that figure raises no eyebrows.

From a catering company owner in Boston who has laid off 32 of his 35 employees after losing 90 percent of his business and fears for his daughter's mental health - "the damage being done to the country's youth is criminal":

Good Afternoon Mr. Berenson,

I hope you are well. I wanted to take a moment to simply say thank you for your work exposing the problems with so much of the country's COVID response. Your Twitter and recent Unreported Truths series (I just finished Part 2) have been such a bright spot for me and my family in a sea of seemingly relentless news of impending doom.

I am a restaurant and catering business owner whose livelihood and income has been obliterated by government restrictions here in Massachusetts. Our 2019 gross revenue was about 2.2 million; we're on pace to end 2020 with around $240k in sales. Our

They are mostly remote for school, with some limited in-person school days (they attend private, Catholic high school). Most distressful has been the cancelation of all their normal extra-curricular activities. Sports, trips, clubs, dances, etc. all stripped away despite the overwhelming evidence that these activities are the lifeblood for youth. It's all done in the name of "the safety of the community". Covid clot fears or studies appear totally irrelevant to school administration and public health advocates. The damage being done to the country's youth is criminal.

Your work has been enormously helpful to me in talking to others and hopefully, just for a night, I participated in a Zoom call with the administration of my children's school. They have planned a more hopeful, and practical for the coming basketball season with great anticipation. It was a joy of hope and inspiration. She has fallen in every practice and is hated to every possible extra trailer how she runs. She has come accordingly and amiably with the understanding that this behavior would benefit the greater community. I was able to use what I've learned through your writing to vehemently push back against the decision. Unfortunately, I was unsuccessful; there will be no fun this year at school. My wife and I are tremendously worried about my daughter's mental health, especially as we enter the long, dark and cold New England winter.

The intent of this email is not to complain. I am deeply aware that hundreds of thousands of people across the country have bigger problems than we Another one of the perversions of the language surrounding Covid that happened very early. The public health narcissists took "high risk" and made it include almost everyone, such that it lost its meaning. Now every person who had an inhaler as a kid thinks they are high risk.

This is not really a joke, btw. The risk is so stratified by age that anyone under 50 who isn't near death from other conditions or morbidly obese and diabetic is at close to no risk even if they are not in the baseline group.

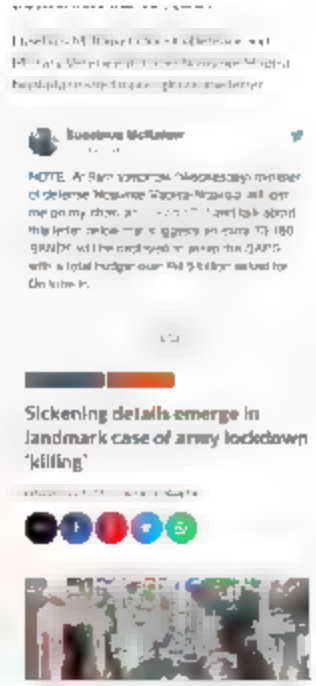
1/ In the last day I have started to get disturbing emails from South Africa, where the president has now directed the army to put 75,000 soldiers in the streets to enforce the lockdown. News articles back them. 58 South Africans have died of #COVID, or 1 in 1 million...

Hello Alex,



The world needs to know what is happening in South Africa.

We have been in lockdown for 26 days.

People are starving in our townships. Mass arrests. Army and police have killed people. Liquor and tobacco and hot food from grocery stores banned.

And now the full army has just been deployed to monitor citizens - 75 000 troops at the cost of R5 billion.

Our official stats predict half of all business will close. And the best compensation our government can give is R350 per month to the unemployed - miniscule. Plus there are reports of politicians stealing food parcels.

Hey, thanks for sending this chart showing total GA hospitalizations have been flat for a week and new ones are trending down. I realize this may be too simple for an economist to understand, but that's what a peak looks like. Before you go down, you stop going up! Crazy, huh?

The biology: ~5 days infection to symptoms, ~5 to ~8 days symptoms to hospitalization. THAT'S WHY THE MODEL PREDICTED A SURGE NOW, ~1-2 weeks post-lockdown. If there's no surge now, and the lockdowns work to reduce transmissibility at all, how can we have a surge later?

BTW: not that anyone needs to trash the idiotic Sturgis study any further - it has been weighed in the balance and found wanting - but it's worth noting no medical journal would touch it. It was posted on the website of the "Institute of Labor Economics."

Here is the newly updated mIHME_UW model with predictions for NY state today (which doesn't need to be predicted, as it's already happened). And here's the actual data from today. As you can see, the NEW model can't even get today right.

Hey, thanks for sending this chart showing total GA hospitalizations have been flat for a week and new ones are trending down. I realize this may be too simple for an economist to understand, but that's what a peak looks like. Before you go down, you stop going up! Crazy, huh?

J.C. Bradbury @jc_bradbury
Yesterday, Georgia had the highest number of current hospitalizations yet. Also, the Emory chart ends on Sunday, and reported weekend hospital numbers are always low. One hospital, w 5-day-old data: this is...

The real story out of Florida is incredible: 150,000 #SARSCoV2 positive tests in the last two weeks, and effectively NO change in either total hospitalizations or ICU use statewide. Case mix? A huge advance in medicine? This is the story real reporters should chase.

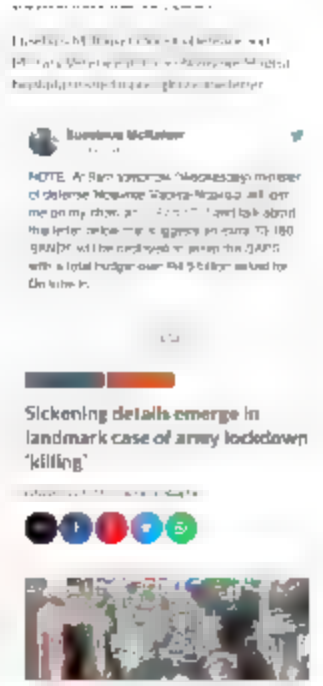
1/ In the last day I have started to get disturbing emails from South Africa, where the president has now directed the army to put 75,000 soldiers in the streets to enforce the lockdown. News articles back them. 58 South Africans have died of #COVID, or 1 in 1 million...

Hello Alex,



The world needs to know what is happening in South Africa.

We have been in lockdown for 26 days.

People are starving in our townships. Mass arrests. Army and police have killed people. Liquor and tobacco and hot food from grocery stores banned.

And now the full army has just been deployed to monitor citizens - 75 000 troops at the cost of R5 billion.

Our official stats predict half of all business will close. And the best compensation our government can give is R350 per month to the unemployed - miniscule. Plus there are reports of politicians stealing food parcels.

In turn, this raises real questions about whether some of the apparent gap between Japan and Europe is real or an artifact of media/government reporting (look for an epidemic in nursing homes, you find one; don't and you don't?). Very hard to know.

Saddest part is that [redacted] is generally a good reporter. And ~13,000 hospitalizations would be a big number - almost as many as NY at the peak. But the media is so in love with the disaster narrative, so ready to believe the worst, that that figure raises no eyebrows.

1/ In the last day I have started to get disturbing emails from South Africa, where the president has now directed the army to put 75,000 soldiers in the streets to enforce the lockdown. News articles back them. 58 South Africans have died of #COVID, or 1 in 1 million...

Hello Alex,

The world needs to know what is happening in South Africa.

We have been in lockdown for 26 days.

People are starving in our townships. Mass arrests. Army and police have killed people. Liquor and tobacco and hot food from grocery stores banned.

And now the full army has just been deployed to monitor citizens - 75 000 troops at the cost of R5 billion.

Our official stats predict half of all business will close. And the best compensation our government can give is R350 per month to the unemployed - miniscule. Plus there are reports of politicians stealing food parcels.

It's just like the flu, bro. Ask @CDCgov TBH I'm surprised they went there, but so be it. (Odds this page survives the night? Un-high.)

> According to the latest CDC COVIDView report, increases in hospitalization rates for COVID-19, which are cumulative, have started to level off. The hospitalization rate is highest among adults 65 and older and similar to what has been seen during a comparable time period during a recent high severity flu season: https://bit.ly/2ViFfIZ

In turn, this raises real questions about whether some of the apparent gap between Japan and Europe is real or an artifact of media/government reporting (look for an epidemic in nursing homes, you find one; don't and you don't?). Very hard to know.

1/ Easy way to think about lockdowns and the importance of the models: if we are going to take a step this harmful, we can only do so for one of two reasons:

1) A catastrophe happening NOW.
2) A catastrophe likely to happen in the near future - with a high degree of certainty.

2/ Outside of NYC, there is NO health-system catastrophe now. This is inarguable.

Which leaves the potential future catastrophe. Which means we are relying on these projections. But the projections have failed badly in the last two weeks. So why are we relying on them?

Hey, thanks for sending this chart showing total GA hospitalizations have been flat for a week and new ones are trending down. I realize this may be too simple for an economist to understand, but that's what a peak looks like. Before you go down, you stop going up! Crazy, huh?

Saddest part is that [redacted] is generally a good reporter. And ~13,000 hospitalizations would be a big number - almost as many as NY at the peak. But the media is so in love with the disaster narrative, so ready to believe the worst, that that figure raises no eyebrows.

1/ Easy way to think about lockdowns and the importance of the models: if we are going to take a step this harmful, we can only do so for one of two reasons:

1) A catastrophe happening NOW.
2) A catastrophe likely to happen in the near future - with a high degree of certainty.

2/ Outside of NYC, there is NO health-system catastrophe now. This is inarguable.

Which leaves the potential future catastrophe. Which means we are relying on these projections. But the projections have failed badly in the last two weeks. So why are we relying on them?

In turn, this raises real questions about whether some of the apparent gap between Japan and Europe is real or an artifact of media/government reporting (look for an epidemic in nursing homes, you find one; don't and you don't?). Very hard to know.

The biology: ~5 days infection to symptoms, ~5 to ~8 days symptoms to hospitalization. THAT'S WHY THE MODEL PREDICTED A SURGE NOW, ~1-2 weeks post-lockdown. If there's no surge now, and the lockdowns work to reduce transmissibility at all, how can we have a surge later?

We have been in lockdown for 26 days.

People are starving in our townships. Mass arrests. Army and police have killed people. Liquor and tobacco and hot food from grocery stores banned.

And now the full army has just been deployed to monitor citizens - 75 000 troops at the cost of R5 billion.

Our official stats predict half of all business will close. And the best compensation our government can give is R350 per month to the unemployed - miniscule. Plus there are reports of politicians stealing food parcels.

The biology: ~5 days infection to symptoms, ~5 to ~8 days symptoms to hospitalization. THAT'S WHY THE MODEL PREDICTED A SURGE NOW, ~1-2 weeks post-lockdown. If there's no surge now, and the lockdowns work to reduce transmissibility at all, how can we have a surge later?

Holy moly, Batman. This study out of Japan (where testing is uncommon) suggests the real infection rate there is 400 to 800 times (!) the reported rate (and, like many European cities, Kobe, Japan had a 3% antibody rate by early April). medrxiv.org/content/10.110 …

In turn, this raises real questions about whether some of the apparent gap between Japan and Europe is real or an artifact of media/government reporting (look for an epidemic in nursing homes, you find one; don't and you don't?). Very hard to know.

1/ Easy way to think about lockdowns and the importance of the models: if we are going to take a step this harmful, we can only do so for one of two reasons:

1) A catastrophe happening NOW.
2) A catastrophe likely to happen in the near future - with a high degree of certainty.

2/ Outside of NYC, there is NO health-system catastrophe now. This is inarguable.

Which leaves the potential future catastrophe. Which means we are relying on these projections. But the projections have failed badly in the last two weeks. So why are we relying on them?

It's just like the flu, bro. Ask @CDCgov TBH I'm surprised they went there, but so be it. (Odds this page survives the night? Un-high.)

> According to the latest CDC COVIDView report, increases in hospitalization rates for COVID-19, which are cumulative, have started to level off. The hospitalization rate is highest among adults 65 and older and similar to what has been seen during a comparable time period during a recent high severity flu season: https://bit.ly/2ViFfIZ

Wondering what's really happening in Texas? Here's the email, from a senior executive at a Texas ER chain that sees thousands of patients a month. He went on the record - a brave move. I'm going to let him speak for himself. (Two tweets of screenshots. Worth reading to the end.)

1/ Easy way to think about lockdowns and the importance of the models: if we are going to take a step this harmful, we can only do so for one of two reasons:

1) A catastrophe happening NOW.
2) A catastrophe likely to happen in the near future - with a high degree of certainty.

2/ Outside of NYC, there is NO health-system catastrophe now. This is inarguable.

Which leaves the potential future catastrophe. Which means we are relying on these projections. But the projections have failed badly in the last two weeks. So why are we relying on them?

Holy moly, Batman. This study out of Japan (where testing is uncommon) suggests the real infection rate there is 400 to 800 times (!) the reported rate (and, like many European cities, Kobe, Japan had a 3% antibody rate by early April). medrxiv.org/content/10.110 …

In turn, this raises real questions about whether some of the apparent gap between Japan and Europe is real or an artifact of media/government reporting (look for an epidemic in nursing homes, you find one; don't and you don't?). Very hard to know.

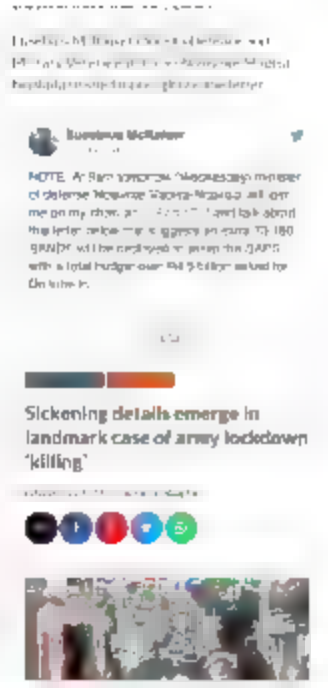
1/ In the last day I have started to get disturbing emails from South Africa, where the president has now directed the army to put 75,000 soldiers in the streets to enforce the lockdown. News articles back them. 58 South Africans have died of #COVID, or 1 in 1 million...

Hello Alex,



The world needs to know what is happening in South Africa.

We have been in lockdown for 26 days.

People are starving in our townships. Mass arrests. Army and police have killed people. Liquor and tobacco and hot food from grocery stores banned.

And now the full army has just been deployed to monitor citizens - 75 000 troops at the cost of R5 billion.

Our official stats predict half of all business will close. And the best compensation our government can give is R350 per month to the unemployed - miniscule. Plus there are reports of politicians stealing food parcels.

Team Apocalypse v Team Reality, a story in two acts. ACT 1: @nyt mes finds a rural hospital in a tiny and desperately poor county on the US/Mexico border - a hospital with NO intensive care beds - and proceeds to proclaim that the #Covid outbreak is "like a horror movie."

The real story out of Florida is incredible: 150,000 #SARSCoV2 positive tests in the last two weeks, and effectively NO change in either total hospitalizations or ICU use statewide. Case mix? A huge advance in medicine? This is the story real reporters should chase.

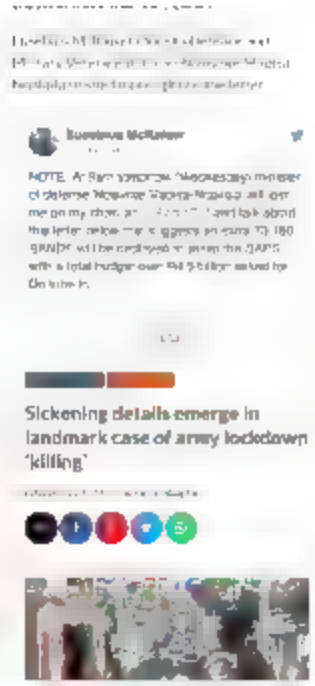
1/ In the last day I have started to get disturbing emails from South Africa, where the president has now directed the army to put 75,000 soldiers in the streets to enforce the lockdown. News articles back them. 58 South Africans have died of #COVID, or 1 in 1 million...

Hello Alex,



The world needs to know what is happening in South Africa.

We have been in lockdown for 26 days.

People are starving in our townships. Mass arrests. Army and police have killed people. Liquor and tobacco and hot food from grocery stores banned.

And now the full army has just been deployed to monitor citizens - 75 000 troops at the cost of R5 billion.

Our official stats predict half of all business will close. And the best compensation our government can give is R350 per month to the unemployed - miniscule. Plus there are reports of politicians stealing food parcels.

"A Tale of Two Pandemics" - Brilliant, self-aware, lacerating email from a man whose #covid experience has been very different than his brother's.

"I don't want to hear 'we're all in this together'... because that's a lie."

Worth reading to the end (6 screenshots).

Alex,

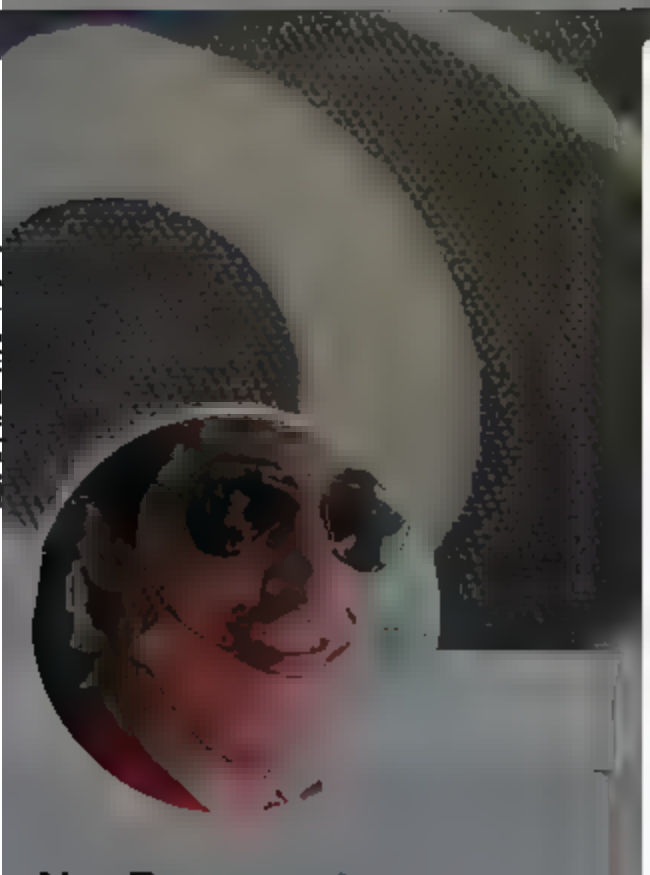
Long time listener, first time caller. I want to thank you for everything you've done in an attempt to bring people the truth and hold those in power accountable. If you want, please feel free to use the below. Please redact my name and email.

I grew up in a working class Brooklyn neighborhood in the 1990s. Everyone I knew went to public schools, played in the local parks, and had parents that worked either city jobs or union jobs. My parents, my brother and his family, my extended family, and my childhood friends all still live there. I moved out in 2007 and am now settled with my wife and daughter in Northern Virginia (NOVA).

...lawyers living in the NOVA suburbs. My brother and his wife are a cook and a hairdresser living in Brooklyn, NY.

My wife and I have been working from home since mid-March; our jobs don't even talk about when/if we're going back anymore. For the past 9 months, we're not commuting into the District during rush hour and we're not worried about missing a paycheck. In fact, since the start of the pandemic federal employees have been authorized to paid COVID related "Administrative Leave" on a weekly basis.

My wife and I roll out of bed, go to our separate home offices and review our emails while watching the morning news. If we have zoom calls, we get dressed from the waist ... and his wife are forced to wait in endless lines, or on hold, in an attempt to navigate unemployment benefits and lost health insurance.



When NYC closed schools my brother had to figure out how to help my nephew finish Kindergarten through zoom. When NOVA daycares closed, I arranged for full time help. As the pandemic dragged on, my brother's family was stuck in a 510 square foot apartment with a 6 year old. My wife and I are "stuck" in a 5,730 square foot house in the NOVA suburbs.

If my brother wanted to relieve some stress through recreation, or get outside during the summer months, too bad - the City closed ...

Hey, thanks for sending this chart showing total GA hospitalizations have been flat for a week and new ones are trending down. I realize this may be too simple for an economist to understand, but that's what a peak looks like. Before you go down, you stop going up! Crazy, huh?

J.C. Bradbury @jc_bradbury
Yesterday, Georgia had the highest number of current hospitalizations yet. Also, the Emory chart ends on Sunday, and reported weekend hospital numbers are always low. One hospital, w 5-day-old data: this is…

1/ Who wants to tell him the ICU census in Houston actually fell over the weekend? Or that broader Southeast Texas data show no overall increase in hospitalizations and a tiny increase in ICU census despite a big two-week jump in Covid cases? The hospitals are NOT being overrun.

Holy moly, Batman. This study out of Japan (where testing is uncommon) suggests the real infection rate there is 400 to 800 times (!) the reported rate (and, like many European cities, Kobe, Japan had a 3% antibody rate by early April). medrxiv.org/content/10.110 ..

In turn, this raises real questions about whether some of the apparent gap between Japan and Europe is real or an artifact of media/government reporting (look for an epidemic in nursing homes, you find one; don't and you don't?). Very hard to know.

2/ 12,673 HAVE BEEN hospitalized in Florida since hospitalizations began in March. The vast majority of those patients are home now. Florida has never had over ~2,000 people hospitalized with #Covid, 3.5% of its total hospital beds. Which presents a slightly different picture.

Saddest part is that [redacted] is generally a good reporter. And ~13,000 hospitalizations would be a big number - almost as many as NY at the peak. But the media is so in love with the disaster narrative, so ready to believe the worst, that that figure raises no eyebrows.

1/ Easy way to think about lockdowns and the importance of the models: if we are going to take a step this harmful, we can only do so for one of two reasons:

1) A catastrophe happening NOW.
2) A catastrophe likely to happen in the near future - with a high degree of certainty.

2/ Outside of NYC, there is NO health-system catastrophe now. This is inarguable.

Which leaves the potential future catastrophe. Which means we are relying on these projections. But the projections have failed badly in the last two weeks. So why are we relying on them?

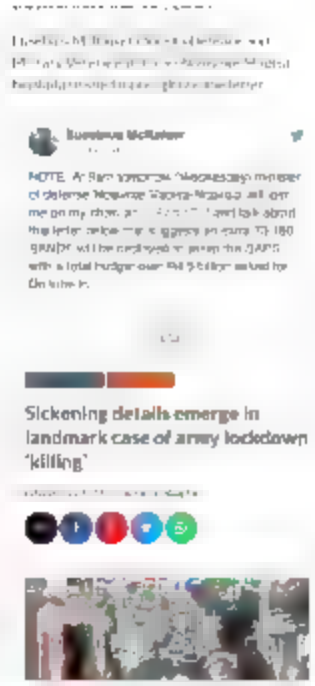
1/ In the last day I have started to get disturbing emails from South Africa, where the president has now directed the army to put 75,000 soldiers in the streets to enforce the lockdown. News articles back them. 58 South Africans have died of #COVID, or 1 in 1 million...

Hello Alex,



The world needs to know what is happening in South Africa.

We have been in lockdown for 26 days.

People are starving in our townships. Mass arrests. Army and police have killed people. Liquor and tobacco and hot food from grocery stores banned.

And now the full army has just been deployed to monitor citizens - 75 000 troops at the cost of R5 billion.

Our official stats predict half of all business will close. And the best compensation our government can give is R350 per month to the unemployed - miniscule. Plus there are reports of politicians stealing food parcels.

The real story out of Florida is incredible: 150,000 #SARSCoV2 positive tests in the last two weeks, and effectively NO change in either total hospitalizations or ICU use statewide. Case mix? A huge advance in medicine? This is the story real reporters should chase.

Team Apocalypse v Team Reality, a story in two acts. ACT 1: @nyt mes finds a rural hospital in a tiny and desperately poor county on the US/Mexico border - a hospital with NO intensive care beds - and proceeds to proclaim that the #Covid outbreak is "like a horror movie."

Christopher Lee for The New York Times

'Like a Horror Movie': A Small Border Hospital Battles the Coronavirus

The hospital in Starr County, Texas, had no I.C.U. at all, and only one doctor on duty for each shift. Then the coronavirus began surging through the Rio Grande Valley.

2/ 12,673 HAVE BEEN hospitalized in Florida since hospitalizations began in March. The vast majority of those patients are home now. Florida has never had over ~2,000 people hospitalized with #Covid, 3.5% of its total hospital beds. Which presents a slightly different picture.

Saddest part is that [redacted] is generally a good reporter. And ~13,000 hospitalizations would be a big number - almost as many as NY at the peak. But the media is so in love with the disaster narrative, so ready to believe the worst, that that figure raises no eyebrows.

1/ Easy way to think about lockdowns and the importance of the models: if we are going to take a step this harmful, we can only do so for one of two reasons:

1) A catastrophe happening NOW.
2) A catastrophe likely to happen in the near future - with a high degree of certainty.

2/ Outside of NYC, there is NO health-system catastrophe now. This is inarguable.

Which leaves the potential future catastrophe. Which means we are relying on these projections. But the projections have failed badly in the last two weeks. So why are we relying on them?

BTW: not that anyone needs to trash the idiotic Sturgis study any further - it has been weighed in the balance and found wanting - but it's worth noting no medical journal would touch it. It was posted on the website of the "Institute of Labor Economics."

Holy moly, Batman. This study out of Japan (where testing is uncommon) suggests the real infection rate there is 400 to 800 times (!) the reported rate (and, like many European cities, Kobe, Japan had a 3% antibody rate by early April). medrxiv.org/content/10.110 …

In turn, this raises real questions about whether some of the apparent gap between Japan and Europe is real or an artifact of media/government reporting (look for an epidemic in nursing homes, you find one; don't and you don't?). Very hard to know.

The biology: ~5 days infection to symptoms, ~5 to ~8 days symptoms to hospitalization. THAT'S WHY THE MODEL PREDICTED A SURGE NOW, ~1-2 weeks post-lockdown. If there's no surge now, and the lockdowns work to reduce transmissibility at all, how can we have a surge later?

The real story out of Florida is incredible: 150,000 #SARSCoV2 positive tests in the last two weeks, and effectively NO change in either total hospitalizations or ICU use statewide. Case mix? A huge advance in medicine? This is the story real reporters should chase.

1/ Easy way to think about lockdowns and the importance of the models: if we are going to take a step this harmful, we can only do so for one of two reasons:

1) A catastrophe happening NOW.
2) A catastrophe likely to happen in the near future - with a high degree of certainty.

Which leaves the potential future catastrophe. Which means we are relying on these projections. But the projections have failed badly in the last two weeks. So why are we relying on them?

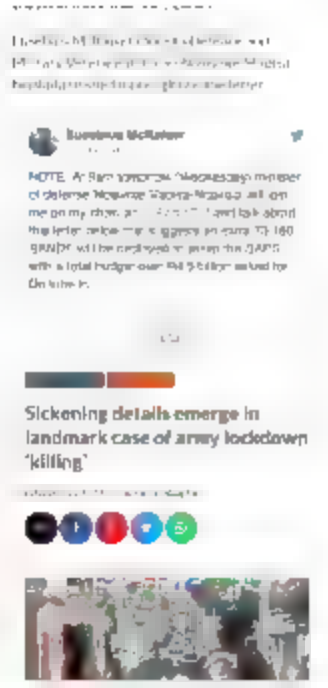
Hello Alex,



The world needs to know what is happening in South Africa.

We have been in lockdown for 26 days.

People are starving in our townships. Mass arrests. Army and police have killed people. Liquor and tobacco and hot food from grocery stores banned.

And now the full army has just been deployed to monitor citizens - 75 000 troops at the cost of R5 billion.

Our official stats predict half of all business will close. And the best compensation our government can give is R350 per month to the unemployed - miniscule. Plus there are reports of politicians stealing food parcels.

Saddest part is that [redacted] is generally a good reporter. And ~13,000 hospitalizations would be a big number - almost as many as NY at the peak. But the media is so in love with the disaster narrative, so ready to believe the worst, that that figure raises no eyebrows.

I cannot grip why they even make models and share them with the public. Sweden have no officially numbers from any calculations or prognosis whatsoever. It is what it is.

86,000 students in Nashville - a poor, urban school district - will be denied even the chance at in-person school in August. Online only.

That'll be tough for the 31% of students who don't have a computer at home.

Hey, thanks for sending this chart showing total GA hospitalizations have been flat for a week and new ones are trending down. I realize this may be too simple for an economist to understand, but that's what a peak looks like. Before you go down, you stop going up! Crazy, huh?

J.C. Bradbury @jc_bradbury
Yesterday, Georgia had the highest number of current hospitalizations yet. Also, the Emory chart ends on Sunday, and reported weekend hospital numbers are always low. One hospital, w 5-day-old data: this is...

The real story out of Florida is incredible: 150,000 #SARSCoV2 positive tests in the last two weeks, and effectively NO change in either total hospitalizations or ICU use statewide. Case mix? A huge advance in medicine? This is the story real reporters should chase.

Holy moly, Batman. This study out of Japan (where testing is uncommon) suggests the real infection rate there is 400 to 800 times (!) the reported rate (and, like many European cities, Kobe, Japan had a 3% antibody rate by early April). medrxiv.org/content/10.110 …

In turn, this raises real questions about whether some of the apparent gap between Japan and Europe is real or an artifact of media/government reporting (look for an epidemic in nursing homes, you find one; don't and you don't?). Very hard to know.

The real story out of Florida is incredible: 150,000 #SARSCoV2 positive tests in the last two weeks, and effectively NO change in either total hospitalizations or ICU use statewide. Case mix? A huge advance in medicine? This is the story real reporters should chase.

Saddest part is that [redacted] is generally a good reporter. And ~13,000 hospitalizations would be a big number - almost as many as NY at the peak. But the media is so in love with the disaster narrative, so ready to believe the worst, that that figure raises no eyebrows.

The biology: ~5 days infection to symptoms, ~5 to ~8 days symptoms to hospitalization. THAT'S WHY THE MODEL PREDICTED A SURGE NOW, ~1-2 weeks post-lockdown. If there's no surge now, and the lockdowns work to reduce transmissibility at all, how can we have a surge later?

1/ Easy way to think about lockdowns and the importance of the models: if we are going to take a step this harmful, we can only do so for one of two reasons:

1) A catastrophe happening NOW.
2) A catastrophe likely to happen in the near future - with a high degree of certainty.

2/ Outside of NYC, there is NO health-system catastrophe now. This is inarguable.

Which leaves the potential future catastrophe. Which means we are relying on these projections. But the projections have failed badly in the last two weeks. So why are we relying on them?

The biology: ~5 days infection to symptoms, ~5 to ~8 days symptoms to hospitalization. THAT'S WHY THE MODEL PREDICTED A SURGE NOW, ~1-2 weeks post-lockdown. If there's no surge now, and the lockdowns work to reduce transmissibility at all, how can we have a surge later?

I cannot grip why they even make models and share them with the public. Sweden have no officially numbers from any calculations or prognosis whatsoever. It is what it is.

2/ 12,673 HAVE BEEN hospitalized in Florida since hospitalizations began in March. The vast majority of those patients are home now. Florida has never had over ~2,000 people hospitalized with #Covid, 3.5% of its total hospital beds. Which presents a slightly different picture.

Saddest part is that [redacted] is generally a good reporter. And ~13,000 hospitalizations would be a big number - almost as many as NY at the peak. But the media is so in love with the disaster narrative, so ready to believe the worst, that that figure raises no eyebrows.

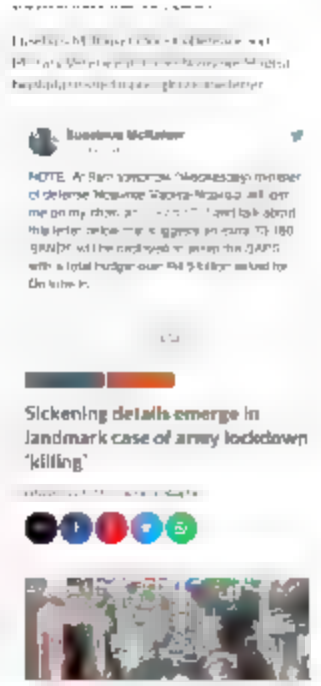
1/ In the last day I have started to get disturbing emails from South Africa, where the president has now directed the army to put 75,000 soldiers in the streets to enforce the lockdown. News articles back them. 58 South Africans have died of #COVID, or 1 in 1 million...

Hello Alex,



The world needs to know what is happening in South Africa.

We have been in lockdown for 26 days.

People are starving in our townships. Mass arrests. Army and police have killed people. Liquor and tobacco and hot food from grocery stores banned.

And now the full army has just been deployed to monitor citizens - 75 000 troops at the cost of R5 billion.

Our official stats predict half of all business will close. And the best compensation our government can give is R350 per month to the unemployed - miniscule. Plus there are reports of politicians stealing food parcels.

In turn, this raises real questions about whether some of the apparent gap between Japan and Europe is real or an artifact of media/government reporting (look for an epidemic in nursing homes, you find one; don't and you don't?). Very hard to know.

1/ Easy way to think about lockdowns and the importance of the models: if we are going to take a step this harmful, we can only do so for one of two reasons:

1) A catastrophe happening NOW.
2) A catastrophe likely to happen in the near future - with a high degree of certainty.

2/ Outside of NYC, there is NO health-system catastrophe now. This is inarguable.

Which leaves the potential future catastrophe. Which means we are relying on these projections. But the projections have failed badly in the last two weeks. So why are we relying on them?

5/ Now, as for masks: along with the report, [redacted] published an even longer annex with the studies used in making the recommendations. Here's the takeaway: 10 studies, no evidence of benefit. [redacted]

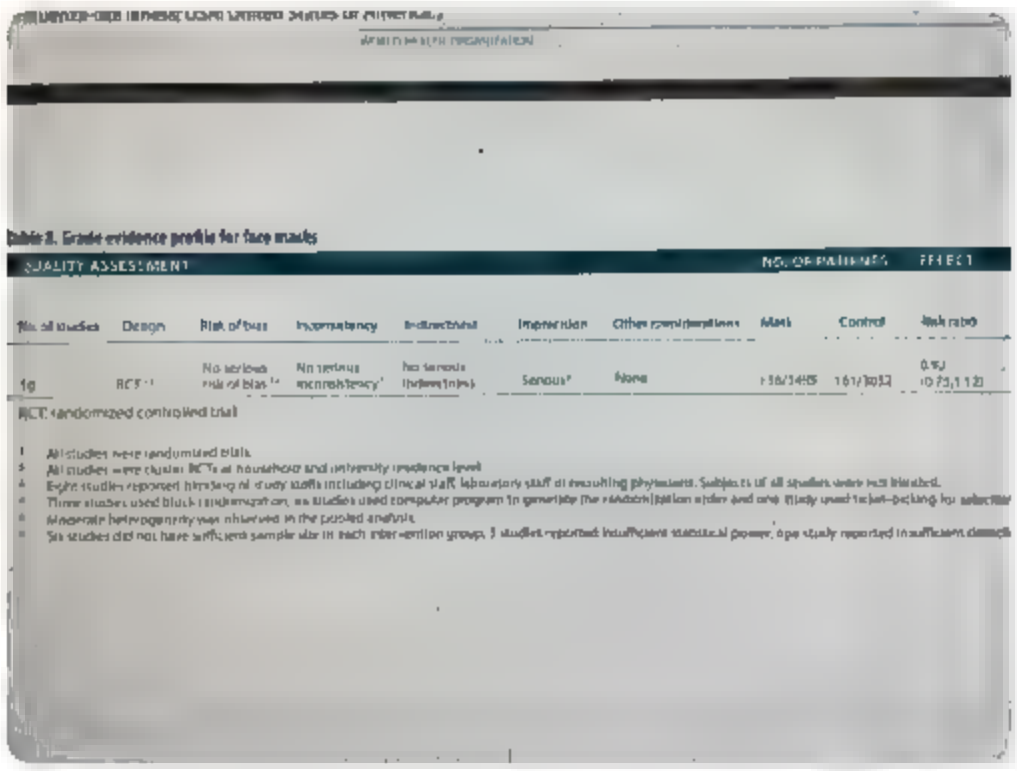

Table 3. Grade evidence profile for face masks

QUALITY ASSESSMENT							NO. OF PATIENTS		EFFECT
No. of studies	Design	Risk of bias	Inconsistency	Indirectness	Imprecision	Other considerations	Mask	Control	Risk ratio

RCT: randomized controlled trial

1 All studies were randomized trials
2 All studies were cluster RCTs at household and community (regional) level
3 Eight studies reported hierarchy of study staffs including clinical staff, laboratory staff or involving physicians. Subjects of all studies were not blinded.
4 Three studies used block randomization, six studies used computer program to generate the randomization order and only study used ticket-picking by selection
5 Moderate heterogeneity was observed in the pooled analysis
6 Six studies did not have sufficient sample size in each intervention groups, 3 studies reported insufficient statistical power, one study reported insufficient clinical

The real story out of Florida is incredible: 150,000 #SARSCoV2 positive tests in the last two weeks, and effectively NO change in either total hospitalizations or ICU use statewide. Case mix? A huge advance in medicine? This is the story real reporters should chase.

Team Apocalypse v Team Reality, a story in two acts. ACT 1: @nyt mes finds a rural hospital in a tiny and desperately poor county on the US/Mexico border - a hospital with NO intensive care beds - and proceeds to proclaim that the #Covid outbreak is "like a horror movie."

Christopher Lee for The New York Times

'Like a Horror Movie': A Small Border Hospital Battles the Coronavirus

The hospital in Starr County, Texas, had no I.C.U. at all, and only one doctor on duty for each shift. Then the coronavirus began surging through the Rio Grande Valley.

Miami - the epicenter of the Florida epidemic - is clearly rolling now too, with hospitalizations down ~20% since the July peak. Of note, Miami-Dade County has 2.7 million people; last month it averaged three #Covid deaths a day in people under 60.

Holy moly, Batman. This study out of Japan (where testing is uncommon) suggests the real infection rate there is 400 to 800 times (!) the reported rate (and, like many European cities, Kobe, Japan had a 3% antibody rate by early April). medrxiv.org/content/10.110 …

In turn, this raises real questions about whether some of the apparent gap between Japan and Europe is real or an artifact of media/government reporting (look for an epidemic in nursing homes, you find one; don't and you don't?). Very hard to know.

The biology: ~5 days infection to symptoms, ~5 to ~8 days symptoms to hospitalization. THAT'S WHY THE MODEL PREDICTED A SURGE NOW, ~1-2 weeks post-lockdown. If there's no surge now, and the lockdowns work to reduce transmissibility at all, how can we have a surge later?

Hey, thanks for sending this chart showing total GA hospitalizations have been flat for a week and new ones are trending down. I realize this may be too simple for an economist to understand, but that's what a peak looks like. Before you go down, you stop going up! Crazy, huh?

J.C. Bradbury @jc_bradbury
Yesterday, Georgia had the highest number of current hospitalizations yet. Also, the Emory chart ends on Sunday, and reported weekend hospital numbers are always low. One hospital, w 5-day-old data: this is...

1/ In the last day I have started to get disturbing emails from South Africa, where the president has now directed the army to put 75,000 soldiers in the streets to enforce the lockdown. News articles back them. 58 South Africans have died of #COVID, or 1 in 1 million...

Hello Alex,

The world needs to know what is happening in South Africa.

We have been in lockdown for 26 days.

People are starving in our townships. Mass arrests. Army and police have killed people. Liquor and tobacco and hot food from grocery stores banned.

And now the full army has just been deployed to monitor citizens - 75 000 troops at the cost of R5 billion.

Our official stats predict half of all business will close. And the best compensation our government can give is R350 per month to the unemployed - miniscule. Plus there are reports of politicians stealing food parcels.

1/ Easy way to think about lockdowns and the importance of the models: if we are going to take a step this harmful, we can only do so for one of two reasons:

1) A catastrophe happening NOW.
2) A catastrophe likely to happen in the near future - with a high degree of certainty.

29 248 579

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 8

2/ Outside of NYC, there is NO health-system catastrophe now. This is inarguable.

Which leaves the potential future catastrophe. Which means we are relying on these projections. But the projections have failed badly in the last two weeks. So why are we relying on them?

Good morning.

I am the Managing Partner and General Counsel of a Texas based company that owns and operates 13 free-standing emergency clinics in the State of Texas. I follow your reporting and wanted to share with you some information on Texas. I want people to hear this story as opposed to the mainstream reporting. However, I am sensitive about putting a target on myself or my company for conveying this information. I am not sure how you've handled this type of situation but I suspect you've had other

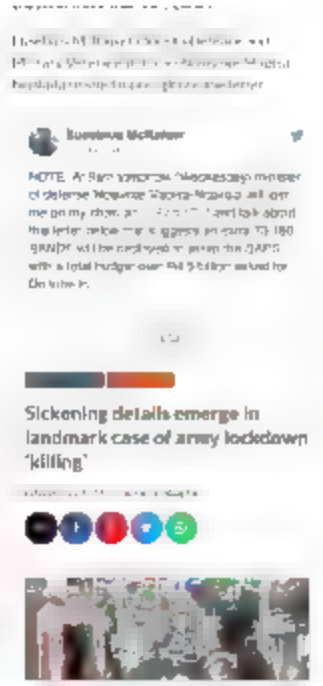
Hello Alex,



The world needs to know what is happening in South Africa.

We have been in lockdown for 26 days.

People are starving in our townships. Mass arrests. Army and police have killed people. Liquor and tobacco and hot food from grocery stores banned.

And now the full army has just been deployed to monitor citizens - 75 000 troops at the cost of R5 billion.

Our official stats predict half of all business will close. And the best compensation our government can give is R350 per month to the unemployed - miniscule. Plus there are reports of politicians stealing food parcels.

Miami - the epicenter of the Florida epidemic - is clearly rolling now too, with hospitalizations down ~20% since the July peak. Of note, Miami-Dade County has 2.7 million people; last month it averaged three #Covid deaths a day in people under 60.

1/ Easy way to think about lockdowns and the importance of the models: if we are going to take a step this harmful, we can only do so for one of two reasons:

1) A catastrophe happening NOW.
2) A catastrophe likely to happen in the near future - with a high degree of certainty.

2/ Outside of NYC, there is NO health-system catastrophe now. This is inarguable.

Which leaves the potential future catastrophe. Which means we are relying on these projections. But the projections have failed badly in the last two weeks. So why are we relying on them?

Holy moly, Batman. This study out of Japan (where testing is uncommon) suggests the real infection rate there is 400 to 800 times (!) the reported rate (and, like many European cities, Kobe, Japan had a 3% antibody rate by early April). medrxiv.org/content/10.110 …

In turn, this raises real questions about whether some of the apparent gap between Japan and Europe is real or an artifact of media/government reporting (look for an epidemic in nursing homes, you find one; don't and you don't?). Very hard to know.

Miami - the epicenter of the Florida epidemic - is clearly rolling now too, with hospitalizations down ~20% since the July peak. Of note, Miami-Dade County has 2.7 million people; last month it averaged three #Covid deaths a day in people under 60.

Saddest part is that [redacted] is generally a good reporter. And ~13,000 hospitalizations would be a big number - almost as many as NY at the peak. But the media is so in love with the disaster narrative, so ready to believe the worst, that that figure raises no eyebrows.

1/ Easy way to think about lockdowns and the importance of the models: if we are going to take a step this harmful, we can only do so for one of two reasons:

1) A catastrophe happening NOW.
2) A catastrophe likely to happen in the near future - with a high degree of certainty.

2/ Outside of NYC, there is NO health-system catastrophe now. This is inarguable.

Which leaves the potential future catastrophe. Which means we are relying on these projections. But the projections have failed badly in the last two weeks. So why are we relying on them?

Wondering what's really happening in Texas? Here's the email, from a senior executive at a Texas ER chain that sees thousands of patients a month. He went on the record - a brave move. I'm going to let him speak for himself. (Two tweets of screenshots. Worth reading to the end.)

The real story out of Florida is incredible: 150,000 #SARSCoV2 positive tests in the last two weeks, and effectively NO change in either total hospitalizations or ICU use statewide. Case mix? A huge advance in medicine? This is the story real reporters should chase.

Saddest part is that [redacted] is generally a good reporter. And ~13,000 hospitalizations would be a big number - almost as many as NY at the peak. But the media is so in love with the disaster narrative, so ready to believe the worst, that that figure raises no eyebrows.

Wow. @IAGovernor (who has a PREGNANT daughter who is a teacher) politely but firmly blows up a panic porn reporter blathering about Schoolpocalypse:

"We have to think about the whole child."

Four minutes and well worth watching.

Hey, thanks for sending this chart showing total GA hospitalizations have been flat for a week and new ones are trending down. I realize this may be too simple for an economist to understand, but that's what a peak looks like. Before you go down, you stop going up! Crazy, huh?

J.C. Bradbury @jc_bradbury
Yesterday, Georgia had the highest number of current hospitalizations yet. Also, the Emory chart ends on Sunday, and reported weekend hospital numbers are always low. One hospital, w 5-day-old data: this is...

Btw - this is exactly the pattern that Arizona and Texas and everywhere else have followed. But I'm sure Georgia will be very different. After all, [redacted] did say it was an running experiment in human sacrifice.

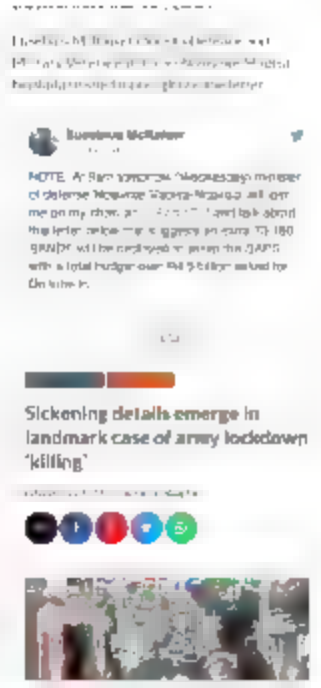
1/ In the last day I have started to get disturbing emails from South Africa, where the president has now directed the army to put 75,000 soldiers in the streets to enforce the lockdown. News articles back them. 58 South Africans have died of #COVID, or 1 in 1 million...

Hello Alex,



The world needs to know what is happening in South Africa.

We have been in lockdown for 26 days.

People are starving in our townships. Mass arrests. Army and police have killed people. Liquor and tobacco and hot food from grocery stores banned.

And now the full army has just been deployed to monitor citizens - 75 000 troops at the cost of R5 billion.

Our official stats predict half of all business will close. And the best compensation our government can give is R350 per month to the unemployed - miniscule. Plus there are reports of politicians stealing food parcels.

2/ Of note, only 6% of South Africans are over 65, so the country is at low risk in any case; it is unclear why the gov't has used such draconian measures (and extended them despite the lack of a surge). But the SA president has been

The biology: ~5 days infection to symptoms, ~5 to ~8 days symptoms to hospitalization. THAT'S WHY THE MODEL PREDICTED A SURGE NOW, ~1-2 weeks post-lockdown. If there's no surge now, and the lockdowns work to reduce transmissibility at all, how can we have a surge later?

In turn, this raises real questions about whether some of the apparent gap between Japan and Europe is real or an artifact of media/government reporting (look for an epidemic in nursing homes, you find one; don't and you don't?). Very hard to know.

Saddest part is that [redacted] is generally a good reporter. And ~13,000 hospitalizations would be a big number - almost as many as NY at the peak. But the media is so in love with the disaster narrative, so ready to believe the worst, that that figure raises no eyebrows.

7/ Now, despite this lack of what some nutty skeptics would call "proof" or "scientific evidence," choked out a "conditional" recommendation that in "severe epidemics," asymptomatic people might want to wear masks - "although there is no evidence that this is effective."

1/ Easy way to think about lockdowns and the importance of the models: if we are going to take a step this harmful, we can only do so for one of two reasons:

1) A catastrophe happening NOW.
2) A catastrophe likely to happen in the near future - with a high degree of certainty.

2/ Outside of NYC, there is NO health-system catastrophe now. This is inarguable.

Which leaves the potential future catastrophe. Which means we are relying on these projections. But the projections have failed badly in the last two weeks. So why are we relying on them?

2/ 12,673 HAVE BEEN hospitalized in Florida since hospitalizations began in March. The vast majority of those patients are home now. Florida has never had over ~2,000 people hospitalized with #Covid, 3.5% of its total hospital beds. Which presents a slightly different picture.

Saddest part is that [redacted] is generally a good reporter. And ~13,000 hospitalizations would be a big number - almost as many as NY at the peak. But the media is so in love with the disaster narrative, so ready to believe the worst, that that figure raises no eyebrows.

1/ In the last day I have started to get disturbing emails from South Africa, where the president has now directed the army to put 75,000 soldiers in the streets to enforce the lockdown. News articles back them. 58 South Africans have died of #COVID, or 1 in 1 million...

Hello Alex,

The world needs to know what is happening in South Africa.

We have been in lockdown for 26 days.

People are starving in our townships. Mass arrests. Army and police have killed people. Liquor and tobacco and hot food from grocery stores banned.

And now the full army has just been deployed to monitor citizens - 75 000 troops at the cost of R5 billion.

Our official stats predict half of all business will close. And the best compensation our government can give is R350 per month to the unemployed - miniscule. Plus there are reports of politicians stealing food parcels.

Hey, thanks for sending this chart showing total GA hospitalizations have been flat for a week and new ones are trending down. I realize this may be too simple for an economist to understand, but that's what a peak looks like. Before you go down, you stop going up! Crazy, huh?

The real story out of Florida is incredible: 150,000 #SARSCoV2 positive tests in the last two weeks, and effectively NO change in either total hospitalizations or ICU use statewide. Case mix? A huge advance in medicine? This is the story real reporters should chase.

The biology: ~5 days infection to symptoms, ~5 to ~8 days symptoms to hospitalization. THAT'S WHY THE MODEL PREDICTED A SURGE NOW, ~1-2 weeks post-lockdown. If there's no surge now, and the lockdowns work to reduce transmissibility at all, how can we have a surge later?

86,000 students in Nashville - a poor, urban school district - will be denied even the chance at in-person school in August. Online only.

That'll be tough for the 31% of students who don't have a computer at home.

BTW: not that anyone needs to trash the idiotic Sturgis study any further - it has been weighed in the balance and found wanting - but it's worth noting no medical journal would touch it. It was posted on the website of the "Institute of Labor Economics."

1/ Easy way to think about lockdowns and the importance of the models: if we are going to take a step this harmful, we can only do so for one of two reasons:

1) A catastrophe happening NOW.
2) A catastrophe likely to happen in the near future - with a high degree of certainty.

2/ Outside of NYC, there is NO health-system catastrophe now. This is inarguable.

Which leaves the potential future catastrophe. Which means we are relying on these projections. But the projections have failed badly in the last two weeks. So why are we relying on them?

Team Apocalypse v Team Reality, a story in two acts. ACT 1: @nyt mes finds a rural hospital in a tiny and desperately poor county on the US/Mexico border - a hospital with NO intensive care beds - and proceeds to proclaim that the #Covid outbreak is "like a horror movie."

'Like a Horror Movie': A Small Border Hospital Battles the Coronavirus

The hospital in Starr County, Texas, had no I.C.U. at all, and only one doctor on duty for each shift. Then the coronavirus began surging through the Rio Grande Valley.

Saddest part is that [redacted] is generally a good reporter. And ~13,000 hospitalizations would be a big number - almost as many as NY at the peak. But the media is so in love with the disaster narrative, so ready to believe the worst, that that figure raises no eyebrows.

The biology: ~5 days infection to symptoms, ~5 to ~8 days symptoms to hospitalization. THAT'S WHY THE MODEL PREDICTED A SURGE NOW, ~1-2 weeks post-lockdown. If there's no surge now, and the lockdowns work to reduce transmissibility at all, how can we have a surge later?

BTW: not that anyone needs to trash the idiotic Sturgis study any further - it has been weighed in the balance and found wanting - but it's worth noting no medical journal would touch it. It was posted on the website of the "Institute of Labor Economics."

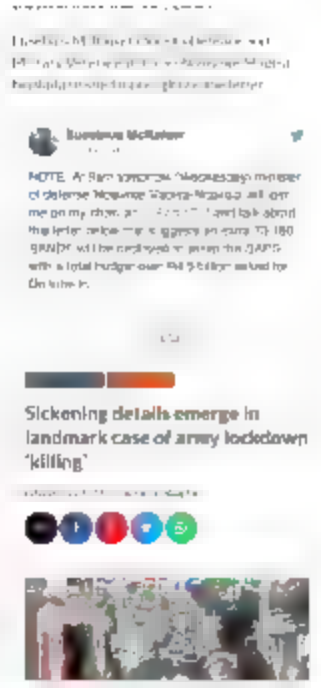
1/ In the last day I have started to get disturbing emails from South Africa, where the president has now directed the army to put 75,000 soldiers in the streets to enforce the lockdown. News articles back them. 58 South Africans have died of #COVID, or 1 in 1 million...

Hello Alex,



The world needs to know what is happening in South Africa.

We have been in lockdown for 26 days.

People are starving in our townships. Mass arrests. Army and police have killed people. Liquor and tobacco and hot food from grocery stores banned.

And now the full army has just been deployed to monitor citizens - 75 000 troops at the cost of R5 billion.

Our official stats predict half of all business will close. And the best compensation our government can give is R350 per month to the unemployed - miniscule. Plus there are reports of politicians stealing food parcels.

In turn, this raises real questions about whether some of the apparent gap between Japan and Europe is real or an artifact of media/government reporting (look for an epidemic in nursing homes, you find one; don't and you don't?). Very hard to know.

The biology: ~5 days infection to symptoms, ~5 to ~8 days symptoms to hospitalization. THAT'S WHY THE MODEL PREDICTED A SURGE NOW, ~1-2 weeks post-lockdown. If there's no surge now, and the lockdowns work to reduce transmissibility at all, how can we have a surge later?

Another day of Houston hospital statistics: 2,100 empty beds, 1% week over week growth in hospitalized #Covid patients. Or, as @propublica would say, "ALL THE HOSPITALS ARE FULL!"

I'm sure y'all will be updating that article real soon.

Miami - the epicenter of the Florida epidemic - is clearly rolling now too, with hospitalizations down ~20% since the July peak. Of note, Miami-Dade County has 2.7 million people; last month it averaged three #Covid deaths a day in people under 60.

2/ 12,673 HAVE BEEN hospitalized in Florida since hospitalizations began in March. The vast majority of those patients are home now. Florida has never had over ~2,000 people hospitalized with #Covid, 3.5% of its total hospital beds. Which presents a slightly different picture.

Saddest part is that [redacted] is generally a good reporter. And ~13,000 hospitalizations would be a big number - almost as many as NY at the peak. But the media is so in love with the disaster narrative, so ready to believe the worst, that that figure raises no eyebrows.

1/ Easy way to think about lockdowns and the importance of the models: if we are going to take a step this harmful, we can only do so for one of two reasons:

1) A catastrophe happening NOW.
2) A catastrophe likely to happen in the near future - with a high degree of certainty.

2/ Outside of NYC, there is NO health-system catastrophe now. This is inarguable.

Which leaves the potential future catastrophe. Which means we are relying on these projections. But the projections have failed badly in the last two weeks. So why are we relying on them?

Team Apocalypse v Team Reality, a story in two acts. ACT 1: @nyt mes finds a rural hospital in a tiny and desperately poor county on the US/Mexico border - a hospital with NO intensive care beds - and proceeds to proclaim that the #Covid outbreak is "like a horror movie."

In turn, this raises real questions about whether some of the apparent gap between Japan and Europe is real or an artifact of media/government reporting (look for an epidemic in nursing homes, you find one; don't and you don't?). Very hard to know.

We have been in lockdown for 26 days.

People are starving in our townships. Mass arrests. Army and police have killed people. Liquor and tobacco and hot food from grocery stores banned.

And now the full army has just been deployed to monitor citizens - 75 000 troops at the cost of R5 billion.

Our official stats predict half of all business will close. And the best compensation our government can give is R350 per month to the unemployed - miniscule. Plus there are reports of politicians stealing food parcels.

1/ Easy way to think about lockdowns and the importance of the models: if we are going to take a step this harmful, we can only do so for one of two reasons:

The real story out of Florida is incredible: 150,000 #SARSCoV2 positive tests in the last two weeks, and effectively NO change in either total hospitalizations or ICU use statewide. Case mix? A huge advance in medicine? This is the story real reporters should chase.

2/ The Setrac data. A mix of factors are probably driving the divergence - but this strongly suggests a lot of WITH Covid and not FROM Covid admissions.

7/ Now, despite this lack of what some nutty skeptics would call "proof" or "scientific evidence," choked out a "conditional" recommendation that in "severe epidemics," asymptomatic people might want to wear masks - "although there is no evidence that this is effective."

Miami - the epicenter of the Florida epidemic - is clearly rolling now too, with hospitalizations down ~20% since the July peak. Of note, Miami-Dade County has 2.7 million people; last month it averaged three #Covid deaths a day in people under 60.

The biology: ~5 days infection to symptoms, ~5 to ~8 days symptoms to hospitalization. THAT'S WHY THE MODEL PREDICTED A SURGE NOW, ~1-2 weeks post-lockdown. If there's no surge now, and the lockdowns work to reduce transmissibility at all, how can we have a surge later?

1/ Easy way to think about lockdowns and the importance of the models: if we are going to take a step this harmful, we can only do so for one of two reasons:

1) A catastrophe happening NOW.
2) A catastrophe likely to happen in the near future - with a high degree of certainty.

2/ Outside of NYC, there is NO health-system catastrophe now. This is inarguable.

Which leaves the potential future catastrophe. Which means we are relying on these projections. But the projections have failed badly in the last two weeks. So why are we relying on them?

Holy moly, Batman. This study out of Japan (where testing is uncommon) suggests the real infection rate there is 400 to 800 times (!) the reported rate (and, like many European cities, Kobe, Japan had a 3% antibody rate by early April). medrxiv.org/content/10.110 …

In turn, this raises real questions about whether some of the apparent gap between Japan and Europe is real or an artifact of media/government reporting (look for an epidemic in nursing homes, you find one; don't and you don't?). Very hard to know.

The biology: ~5 days infection to symptoms, ~5 to ~8 days symptoms to hospitalization. THAT'S WHY THE MODEL PREDICTED A SURGE NOW, ~1-2 weeks post-lockdown. If there's no surge now, and the lockdowns work to reduce transmissibility at all, how can we have a surge later?

Saddest part is that [redacted] is generally a good reporter. And ~13,000 hospitalizations would be a big number - almost as many as NY at the peak. But the media is so in love with the disaster narrative, so ready to believe the worst, that that figure raises no eyebrows.

In turn, this raises real questions about whether some of the apparent gap between Japan and Europe is real or an artifact of media/government reporting (look for an epidemic in nursing homes, you find one; don't and you don't?). Very hard to know.

1/ In the last day I have started to get disturbing emails from South Africa, where the president has now directed the army to put 75,000 soldiers in the streets to enforce the lockdown. News articles back them. 58 South Africans have died of #COVID, or 1 in 1 million...

Hello Alex,

The world needs to know what is happening in South Africa.

We have been in lockdown for 26 days.

People are starving in our townships. Mass arrests. Army and police have killed people. Liquor and tobacco and hot food from grocery stores banned.

And now the full army has just been deployed to monitor citizens - 75 000 troops at the cost of R5 billion.

Our official stats predict half of all business will close. And the best compensation our government can give is R350 per month to the unemployed - miniscule. Plus there are reports of politicians stealing food parcels.

The real story out of Florida is incredible: 150,000 #SARSCoV2 positive tests in the last two weeks, and effectively NO change in either total hospitalizations or ICU use statewide. Case mix? A huge advance in medicine? This is the story real reporters should chase.

Good morning.

I am the Managing Partner and General Counsel of a Texas based company that owns and operates 13 free-standing emergency clinics in the State of Texas. I follow your reporting and wanted to share with you some information on Texas. I want people to hear this story as opposed to the mainstream reporting. However, I am sensitive about putting a target on myself or my company for conveying this information. I am not sure how you've handled this type of situation but I suspect you've had other

1/ In the last day I have started to get disturbing emails from South Africa, where the president has now directed the army to put 75,000 soldiers in the streets to enforce the lockdown. News articles back them. 58 South Africans have died of #COVID, or 1 in 1 million...

Hello Alex,

The world needs to know what is happening in South Africa.

We have been in lockdown for 26 days.

People are starving in our townships. Mass arrests. Army and police have killed people. Liquor and tobacco and hot food from grocery stores banned.

And now the full army has just been deployed to monitor citizens - 75 000 troops at the cost of R5 billion.

Our official stats predict half of all business will close. And the best compensation our government can give is R350 per month to the unemployed - miniscule. Plus there are reports of politicians stealing food parcels.

86,000 students in Nashville - a poor, urban school district - will be denied even the chance at in-person school in August. Online only.

That'll be tough for the 31% of students who don't have a computer at home.

In turn, this raises real questions about whether some of the apparent gap between Japan and Europe is real or an artifact of media/government reporting (look for an epidemic in nursing homes, you find one; don't and you don't?). Very hard to know.

Saddest part is that [redacted] is generally a good reporter. And ~13,000 hospitalizations would be a big number - almost as many as NY at the peak. But the media is so in love with the disaster narrative, so ready to believe the worst, that that figure raises no eyebrows.

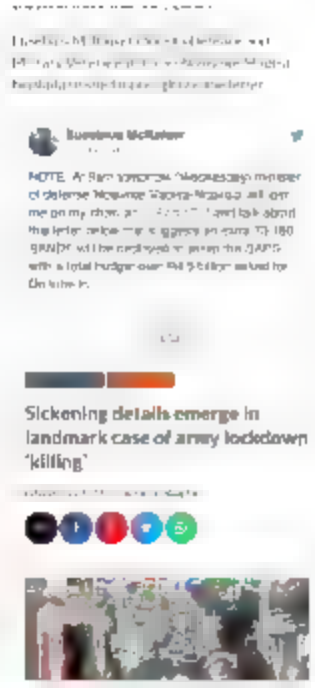
1/ In the last day I have started to get disturbing emails from South Africa, where the president has now directed the army to put 75,000 soldiers in the streets to enforce the lockdown. News articles back them. 58 South Africans have died of #COVID, or 1 in 1 million...

Hello Alex,



The world needs to know what is happening in South Africa.

We have been in lockdown for 26 days.

People are starving in our townships. Mass arrests. Army and police have killed people. Liquor and tobacco and hot food from grocery stores banned.

And now the full army has just been deployed to monitor citizens - 75 000 troops at the cost of R5 billion.

Our official stats predict half of all business will close. And the best compensation our government can give is R350 per month to the unemployed - miniscule. Plus there are reports of politicians stealing food parcels.

Miami - the epicenter of the Florida epidemic - is clearly rolling now too, with hospitalizations down ~20% since the July peak. Of note, Miami-Dade County has 2.7 million people; last month it averaged three #Covid deaths a day in people under 60.

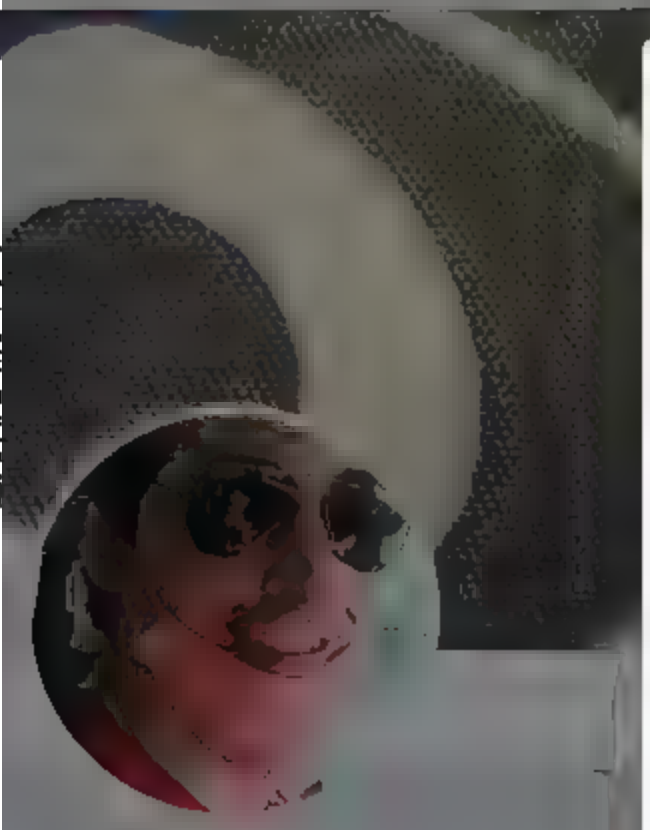
Team Apocalypse v Team Reality, a story in two acts. ACT 1: @nytimes finds a rural hospital in a tiny and desperately poor county on the US/Mexico border - a hospital with NO intensive care beds - and proceeds to proclaim that the #Covid outbreak is "like a horror movie."

Christopher Lee for The New York Times



'Like a Horror Movie': A Small Border Hospital Battles the Coronavirus

The hospital in Starr County, Texas, had no I.C.U. at all, and only one doctor on duty for each shift. Then the coronavirus began surging through the Rio Grande Valley.

Hey, thanks for sending this chart showing total GA hospitalizations have been flat for a week and new ones are trending down. I realize this may be too simple for an economist to understand, but that's what a peak looks like. Before you go down, you stop going up! Crazy, huh?

J.C. Bradbury @jc_bradbury
Yesterday, Georgia had the highest number of current hospitalizations yet. Also, the Emory chart ends on Sunday, and reported weekend hospital numbers are always low. One hospital, w 5-day-old data: this is...

1/ Easy way to think about lockdowns and the importance of the models: if we are going to take a step this harmful, we can only do so for one of two reasons:

1) A catastrophe happening NOW.
2) A catastrophe likely to happen in the near future - with a high degree of certainty.

Which leaves the potential future catastrophe. Which means we are relying on these projections. But the projections have failed badly in the last two weeks. So why are we relying on them?

The biology: ~5 days infection to symptoms, ~5 to ~8 days symptoms to hospitalization. THAT'S WHY THE MODEL PREDICTED A SURGE NOW, ~1-2 weeks post-lockdown. If there's no surge now, and the lockdowns work to reduce transmissibility at all, how can we have a surge later?

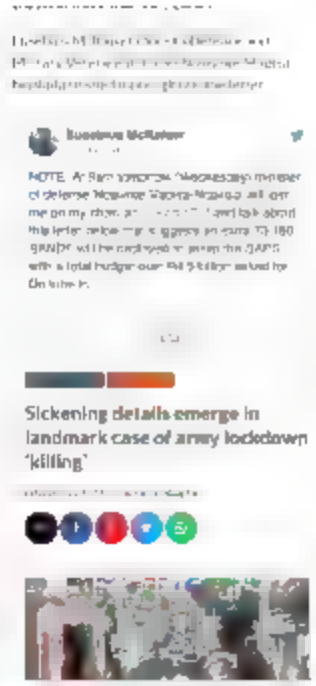
1/ In the last day I have started to get disturbing emails from South Africa, where the president has now directed the army to put 75,000 soldiers in the streets to enforce the lockdown. News articles back them. 58 South Africans have died of #COVID, or 1 in 1 million...

Hello Alex,



The world needs to know what is happening in South Africa.

We have been in lockdown for 26 days.

People are starving in our townships. Mass arrests. Army and police have killed people. Liquor and tobacco and hot food from grocery stores banned.

And now the full army has just been deployed to monitor citizens - 75 000 troops at the cost of R5 billion.

Our official stats predict half of all business will close. And the best compensation our government can give is R350 per month to the unemployed - miniscule. Plus there are reports of politicians stealing food parcels.

1/ Easy way to think about lockdowns and the importance of the models: if we are going to take a step this harmful, we can only do so for one of two reasons:

Which leaves the potential future catastrophe. Which means we are relying on these projections. But the projections have failed badly in the last two weeks. So why are we relying on them?

7/ Now, despite this lack of what some nutty skeptics would call "proof" or "scientific evidence," choked out a "conditional" recommendation that in "severe epidemics," asymptomatic people might want to wear masks - "although there is no evidence that this is effective."

1/ Easy way to think about lockdowns and the importance of the models: if we are going to take a step this harmful, we can only do so for one of two reasons:

1) A catastrophe happening NOW.
2) A catastrophe likely to happen in the near future - with a high degree of certainty.

2/ Outside of NYC, there is NO health-system catastrophe now. This is inarguable.

Which leaves the potential future catastrophe. Which means we are relying on these projections. But the projections have failed badly in the last two weeks. So why are we relying on them?

Here is the newly updated mIHME_UW model with predictions for NY state today (which doesn't need to be predicted, as it's already happened). And here's the actual data from today. As you can see, the NEW model can't even get today right.

BTW: not that anyone needs to trash the idiotic Sturgis study any further - it has been weighed in the balance and found wanting - but it's worth noting no medical journal would touch it. It was posted on the website of the "Institute of Labor Economics."

Holy moly, Batman. This study out of Japan (where testing is uncommon) suggests the real infection rate there is 400 to 800 times (!) the reported rate (and, like many European cities, Kobe, Japan had a 3% antibody rate by early April). medrxiv.org/content/10.110 …

In turn, this raises real questions about whether some of the apparent gap between Japan and Europe is real or an artifact of media/government reporting (look for an epidemic in nursing homes, you find one; don't and you don't?). Very hard to know.

1/ In the last day I have started to get disturbing emails from South Africa, where the president has now directed the army to put 75,000 soldiers in the streets to enforce the lockdown. News articles back them. 58 South Africans have died of #COVID, or 1 in 1 million...

Hello Alex,

The world needs to know what is happening in South Africa.

We have been in lockdown for 26 days.

People are starving in our townships. Mass arrests. Army and police have killed people. Liquor and tobacco and hot food from grocery stores banned.

And now the full army has just been deployed to monitor citizens - 75 000 troops at the cost of R5 billion.

Our official stats predict half of all business will close. And the best compensation our government can give is R350 per month to the unemployed - miniscule. Plus there are reports of politicians stealing food parcels.

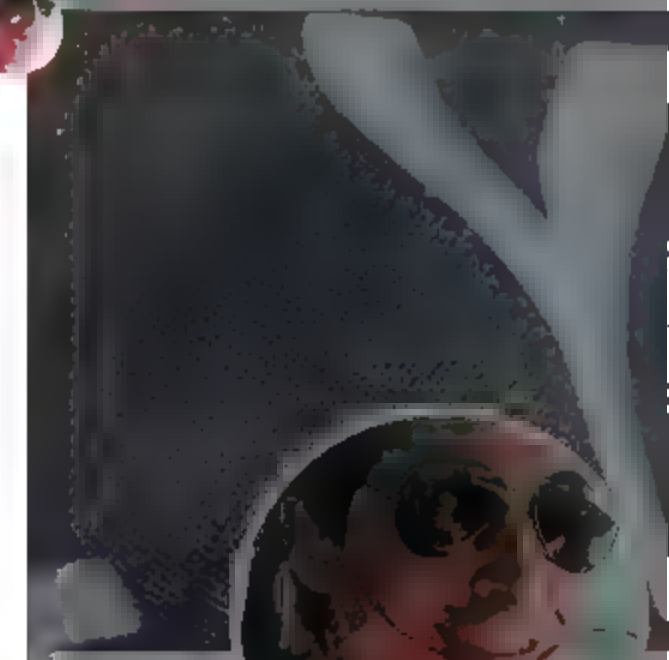
Team Apocalypse v Team Reality, a story in two acts. ACT 1: @nytimes finds a rural hospital in a tiny and desperately poor county on the US/Mexico border - a hospital with NO intensive care beds - and proceeds to proclaim that the #Covid outbreak is “like a horror movie.”

Christopher Lee for The New York Times

‘Like a Horror Movie’: A Small Border Hospital Battles the Coronavirus



The hospital in Starr County, Texas, had no I.C.U. at all, and only one doctor on duty for each shift. Then the coronavirus began surging through the Rio Grande Valley.

The biology: ~5 days infection to symptoms, ~5 to ~8 days symptoms to hospitalization. THAT'S WHY THE MODEL PREDICTED A SURGE NOW, ~1-2 weeks post-lockdown. If there's no surge now, and the lockdowns work to reduce transmissibility at all, how can we have a surge later?

Saddest part is that [redacted] is generally a good reporter. And ~13,000 hospitalizations would be a big number - almost as many as NY at the peak. But the media is so in love with the disaster narrative, so ready to believe the worst, that that figure raises no eyebrows.

BTW: not that anyone needs to trash the idiotic Sturgis study any further - it has been weighed in the balance and found wanting - but it's worth noting no medical journal would touch it. It was posted on the website of the "Institute of Labor Economics."

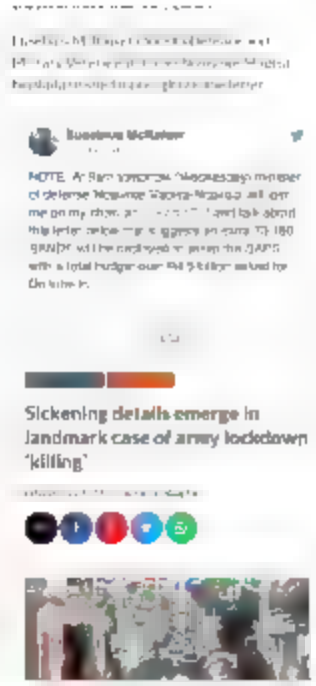
1/ In the last day I have started to get disturbing emails from South Africa, where the president has now directed the army to put 75,000 soldiers in the streets to enforce the lockdown. News articles back them. 58 South Africans have died of #COVID, or 1 in 1 million...

Hello Alex,



The world needs to know what is happening in South Africa.

We have been in lockdown for 26 days.

People are starving in our townships. Mass arrests. Army and police have killed people. Liquor and tobacco and hot food from grocery stores banned.

And now the full army has just been deployed to monitor citizens - 75 000 troops at the cost of R5 billion.

Our official stats predict half of all business will close. And the best compensation our government can give is R350 per month to the unemployed - miniscule. Plus there are reports of politicians stealing food parcels.

In turn, this raises real questions about whether some of the apparent gap between Japan and Europe is real or an artifact of media/government reporting (look for an epidemic in nursing homes, you find one; don't and you don't?). Very hard to know.

The biology: ~5 days infection to symptoms, ~5 to ~8 days symptoms to hospitalization. THAT'S WHY THE MODEL PREDICTED A SURGE NOW, ~1-2 weeks post-lockdown. If there's no surge now, and the lockdowns work to reduce transmissibility at all, how can we have a surge later?

Saddest part is that [redacted] is generally a good reporter. And ~13,000 hospitalizations would be a big number - almost as many as NY at the peak. But the media is so in love with the disaster narrative, so ready to believe the worst, that that figure raises no eyebrows.

1/ Easy way to think about lockdowns and the importance of the models: if we are going to take a step this harmful, we can only do so for one of two reasons:

1) A catastrophe happening NOW.
2) A catastrophe likely to happen in the near future - with a high degree of certainty.

Which leaves the potential future catastrophe. Which means we are relying on these projections. But the projections have failed badly in the last two weeks. So why are we relying on them?

1/ As you sit home watching #COVID death counts spiral, please know the official @CDCgov guidance for coding COVID-related deaths is as follows: any death where the disease "caused or is assumed to have caused or contributed to death." Confirmed lab tests are not required...

1:06 PM 29%

cdc.gov

NVSS National Vital Statistics System

COVID-19 Alert No. 2
March 24, 2020

New ICD code introduced for COVID-19 deaths
This email is to alert you that a newly-introduced ICD code has been implemented to accurately capture mortality data for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) on death certificates.

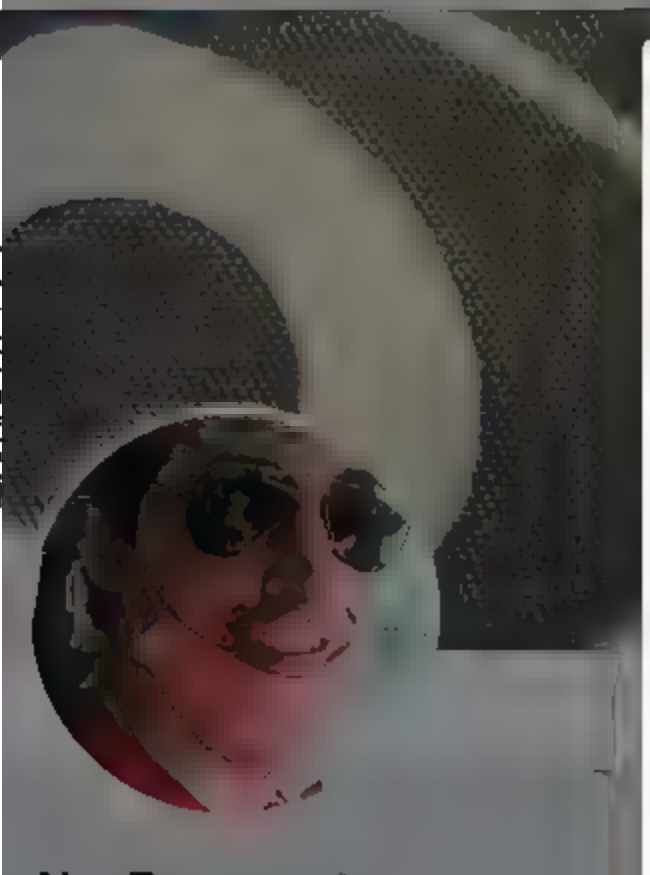
Please read carefully and forward this email to the state statistical staff in your office who are involved in the preparation of mortality data, as well as others who may receive questions when the data are released.

What is the new code?
The new ICD code for Coronavirus Disease 2019 (COVID-19) is U07.1, and below is how it will appear in formal tabular list format.

U07.1 COVID-19
Excludes: Coronavirus infection, unspecified site (B34.2)
Severe acute respiratory syndrome [SARS], unspecified (U04.9)

The WHO has provided a second code, U07.2, for clinical or epidemiological diagnosis of COVID-19 where a laboratory confirmation is inconclusive or not available. Because laboratory test results are not typically reported on death certificates in the U.S., NCHS is not planning to implement U07.2 for mortality statistics.

When will it be implemented?
Immediately.



Will COVID-19 be the underlying cause?
The underlying cause depends upon what and where conditions are reported on the death certificate. However, the rules for coding and selection of the underlying cause of death are expected to result in COVID-19 being the underlying cause more often than not.

What happens if certifiers report terms other than the suggested terms?
If a death certificate reports coronavirus without identifying a specific strain or explicitly specifying that it is not COVID-19, NCHS will ask the states to follow up to verify whether or not the coronavirus was COVID-19.

Team Apocalypse v Team Reality, a story in two acts. ACT 1: @nyt mes finds a rural hospital in a tiny and desperately poor county on the US/Mexico border - a hospital with NO intensive care beds - and proceeds to proclaim that the #Covid outbreak is “like a horror movie.”

Christopher Lee for The New York Times

‘Like a Horror Movie’: A Small Border Hospital Battles the Coronavirus

The hospital in Starr County, Texas, had no I.C.U. at all, and only one doctor on duty for each shift. Then the coronavirus began surging through the Rio Grande Valley.

In turn, this raises real questions about whether some of the apparent gap between Japan and Europe is real or an artifact of media/government reporting (look for an epidemic in nursing homes, you find one; don't and you don't?). Very hard to know.

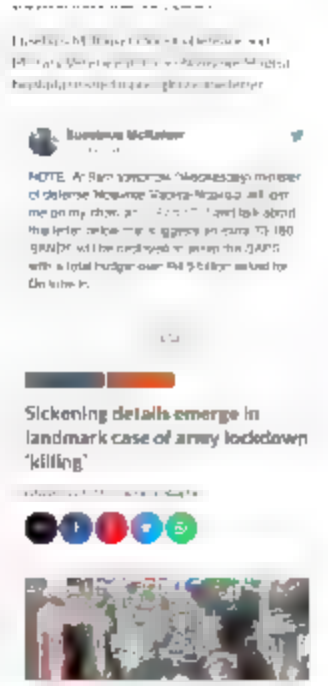
Hello Alex,



The world needs to know what is happening in South Africa.

We have been in lockdown for 26 days.

People are starving in our townships. Mass arrests. Army and police have killed people. Liquor and tobacco and hot food from grocery stores banned.

And now the full army has just been deployed to monitor citizens - 75 000 troops at the cost of R5 billion.

Our official stats predict half of all business will close. And the best compensation our government can give is R350 per month to the unemployed - miniscule. Plus there are reports of politicians stealing food parcels.

Holy moly, Batman. This study out of Japan (where testing is uncommon) suggests the real infection rate there is 400 to 800 times (!) the reported rate (and, like many European cities, Kobe, Japan had a 3% antibody rate by early April). medrxiv.org/content/10.110 …

In turn, this raises real questions about whether some of the apparent gap between Japan and Europe is real or an artifact of media/government reporting (look for an epidemic in nursing homes, you find one; don't and you don't?). Very hard to know.

Miami - the epicenter of the Florida epidemic - is clearly rolling now too, with hospitalizations down ~20% since the July peak. Of note, Miami-Dade County has 2.7 million people; last month it averaged three #Covid deaths a day in people under 60.

1/ In the last day I have started to get disturbing emails from South Africa, where the president has now directed the army to put 75,000 soldiers in the streets to enforce the lockdown. News articles back them. 58 South Africans have died of #COVID, or 1 in 1 million...

Hello Alex,

The world needs to know what is happening in South Africa.

We have been in lockdown for 26 days.

People are starving in our townships. Mass arrests. Army and police have killed people. Liquor and tobacco and hot food from grocery stores banned.

And now the full army has just been deployed to monitor citizens - 75 000 troops at the cost of R5 billion.

Our official stats predict half of all business will close. And the best compensation our government can give is R350 per month to the unemployed - miniscule. Plus there are reports of politicians stealing food parcels.

1/ Easy way to think about lockdowns and the importance of the models: if we are going to take a step this harmful, we can only do so for one of two reasons:

1) A catastrophe happening NOW.
2) A catastrophe likely to happen in the near future - with a high degree of certainty.

2/ Outside of NYC, there is NO health-system catastrophe now. This is inarguable.

Which leaves the potential future catastrophe. Which means we are relying on these projections. But the projections have failed badly in the last two weeks. So why are we relying on them?

1/ In the last day I have started to get disturbing emails from South Africa, where the president has now directed the army to put 75,000 soldiers in the streets to enforce the lockdown. News articles back them. 58 South Africans have died of #COVID, or 1 in 1 million...

Hello Alex,

The world needs to know what is happening in South Africa.

We have been in lockdown for 26 days.

People are starving in our townships. Mass arrests. Army and police have killed people. Liquor and tobacco and hot food from grocery stores banned.

And now the full army has just been deployed to monitor citizens - 75 000 troops at the cost of R5 billion.

Our official stats predict half of all business will close. And the best compensation our government can give is R350 per month to the unemployed - miniscule. Plus there are reports of politicians stealing food parcels.

The biology: ~5 days infection to symptoms, ~5 to ~8 days symptoms to hospitalization. THAT'S WHY THE MODEL PREDICTED A SURGE NOW, ~1-2 weeks post-lockdown. If there's no surge now, and the lockdowns work to reduce transmissibility at all, how can we have a surge later?

Team Apocalypse v Team Reality, a story in two acts. ACT 1: @nyt mes finds a rural hospital in a tiny and desperately poor county on the US/Mexico border - a hospital with NO intensive care beds - and proceeds to proclaim that the #Covid outbreak is "like a horror movie."

'Like a Horror Movie': A Small Border Hospital Battles the Coronavirus

The hospital in Starr County, Texas, had no I.C.U. at all, and only one doctor on duty for each shift. Then the coronavirus began surging through the Rio Grande Valley.

Saddest part is that [redacted] is generally a good reporter. And ~13,000 hospitalizations would be a big number - almost as many as NY at the peak. But the media is so in love with the disaster narrative, so ready to believe the worst, that that figure raises no eyebrows.

Hey, thanks for sending this chart showing total GA hospitalizations have been flat for a week and new ones are trending down. I realize this may be too simple for an economist to understand, but that's what a peak looks like. Before you go down, you stop going up! Crazy, huh?

J.C. Bradbury @jc_bradbury
Yesterday, Georgia had the highest number of current hospitalizations yet. Also, the Emory chart ends on Sunday, and reported weekend hospital numbers are always low. One hospital, w 5-day-old data: this is...

Btw - this is exactly the pattern that Arizona and Texas and everywhere else have followed. But I'm sure Georgia will be very different. After all, [illegible] did say it was an running experiment in human sacrifice.

The real story out of Florida is incredible: 150,000 #SARSCoV2 positive tests in the last two weeks, and effectively NO change in either total hospitalizations or ICU use statewide. Case mix? A huge advance in medicine? This is the story real reporters should chase.

Holy moly, Batman. This study out of Japan (where testing is uncommon) suggests the real infection rate there is 400 to 800 times (!) the reported rate (and, like many European cities, Kobe, Japan had a 3% antibody rate by early April). medrxiv.org/content/10.110 …

In turn, this raises real questions about whether some of the apparent gap between Japan and Europe is real or an artifact of media/government reporting (look for an epidemic in nursing homes, you find one; don't and you don't?). Very hard to know.

Here is the newly updated mIHME_UW model with predictions for NY state today (which doesn't need to be predicted, as it's already happened). And here's the actual data from today. As you can see, the NEW model can't even get today right.

Miami - the epicenter of the Florida epidemic - is clearly rolling now too, with hospitalizations down ~20% since the July peak. Of note, Miami-Dade County has 2.7 million people; last month it averaged three #Covid deaths a day in people under 60.

The hospitalization rate is highest among adults 65 and older and similar to what has been seen during a comparable time period during a recent high severity flu season: https://bit.ly/2ViFfIZ

1/ A couple nice charts here from a big Houston hospital system. First: admissions seem to have peaked after a sharp rise in June (the chart shape is very similar to the Arizona data). Second: 500 more total admissions than the April peak, but only 100 are ICU...

Alex Berenson @AlexBerenson · 2/ Here's the overall data, after 4 months. 217 deaths so far from 11700 positive cases. 80% of hospitalized cases discharged so far. A 2% case fatality rate. Now, some currently hospitalized folks will die, but remember actual cases outnumber positive tests at least 10 to 1...

Miami - the epicenter of the Florida epidemic - is clearly rolling now too, with hospitalizations down ~20% since the July peak. Of note, Miami-Dade County has 2.7 million people; last month it averaged three #Covid deaths a day in people under 60.

Great reader email about deaths in his (rural) county. Too bad @nytimes isn't as honest about #Covid as his local paper.

rural area interesting. See attached headline. Then the breakout.

One of the confirmed COVID deaths didn't list Covid as the cause of death. Or a contributing factor. But... COVID!

It's interesting in a rural area. The numbers are small. Everybody knows everybody. When the first two deaths happened months ago, everybody was asking around to find out who it was. Turns out it was two people who didn't even live here. They were in nursing homes and hadn't been here in a long time. Later we had a case where a lady was in a nursing home in Lancaster or somewhere like that. The home was overrun. Her kids pulled her out and moved here here. Once here they were informed that she was

From a reader who had to close her business in September: “I tried to hard to string things along but it got to a point where there was no string left... I don’t want them (my kids) to see me laying in bed crying so I tell them I have to run errands and I drive around aimlessly.”

Hey Alex,

I noticed you've been sharing stories of people who are suffering the collateral damage of lockdowns.

Attached is a message that I sent to my psychiatrist last week. It might be a lot to read...sorry. I might regret hitting send. But someone with a voice needs to know what is happening to the people behind small businesses. We don’t just take the sign down and find a new pursuit.

I closed my clothing boutique in September. I tried so hard to string things along but it got to the point where there was no string left. I'm swimming in debt. I live in a leafy NE suburb. I have to pretend that it’s Interesting comment from a reader on the experiences of Wisconsin (few restrictions) vs. Minnesota (harsh restrictions)

AA mail.google.com

Primary

Dear Alex,

Minnesota has 10% fewer residents but 5% more deaths than Wisconsin. Wisconsin's non-ICU hospital beds are 84.7% full and ICU beds 86.7% full compared to Minnesota's 91% and 91.2%, respectively. It appears Wisconsin is doing better than Minnesota without being locked down since mid-May when the Wisconsin Supreme Court ruled that the governor could not extend lockdown restrictions without legislative approval. This is an interesting case study because Minnesota and Wisconsin share a border, latitude, climate, demographic profile, and culture. One disadvantage for Minnesota is that Minneapolis is a larger metropolitan area than constitution, similar to many other states: California, New York, New Jersey, etc., concentrates too much power in one person. The governor can fall anywhere on the Covid-19 fear spectrum from being a cowboy and wanting no restrictions including masking to wearing a spacesuit for a walk on the beach alone at 4:00 AM on a rainy day. Wherever they fall on the Covid-19 paradigm, the scary thing is that their ruling is gospel and is not checked by anyone in the government. I feel having to go through the legislative branch may result in negotiated policies that are more balanced, more acceptable to a larger portion of the residents of the state, and more balanced decisions. Another potential problem with one person making the policy decisions alone is that they generally end up being overly cautious because if things go sideways, they don't want all the blame. Having the legislative branch make the decision provides

Arizona: hospitalizations for Covid are now just over half the July 13 peak, positive tests have fallen similarly, and it looks like deaths are rolling too. A very hopeful sign for Texas and Florida, which just reported its lowest Tuesday-Saturday death figure in three weeks.

Universal Masking in Hospitals in the Covid-19 Era

Article

Hospitals are scrambling to intensify their measures for protecting patients and health care workers from the virus. An increasing number of frontline providers are wondering whether this effort should include universal use of masks by all health care workers. Universal masking is already standard practice in Hong Kong, Singapore, and other parts of Asia and has recently been adopted by a handful of U.S. hospitals.

We know that wearing a mask outside health care facilities offers little, if any, protection from infection. Public health authorities define a significant exposure to Covid-19 as face-to-face contact within 6 feet with a patient with symptomatic Covid-19 that is sustained for a

You know why they don't need some of the beds?
You either get better or die quicker than anticipated.
Also, some deaths are people in hospice (no life saving) or care facilities who will never be brought to the hospital.
So the deaths are there, but not the hospitalizations.

We don't need fantasies of a pill that will save us from the apocalypse; we need a calm explanation of the non-apocalyptic realities here, how we're managing them, and how if we've learned anything in the last four months it's that we CAN and WILL handle this.

While I agree with you in all of this, HCQ is not a fantasy. It's a cheap drug that is safe and has been around for over 60 years. Say it doesn't work, fine. But big pharma leading the charge to call it DANGEROUS, doesn't give you pause? Why would they do that?

HCQ is a great prophylactic and the Zelenko cocktail works well when administered early on.

Another pulmonary embolism case here - this of a 28-year-old woman (active before the lockdowns). Fortunately, she went to the ER and survived.

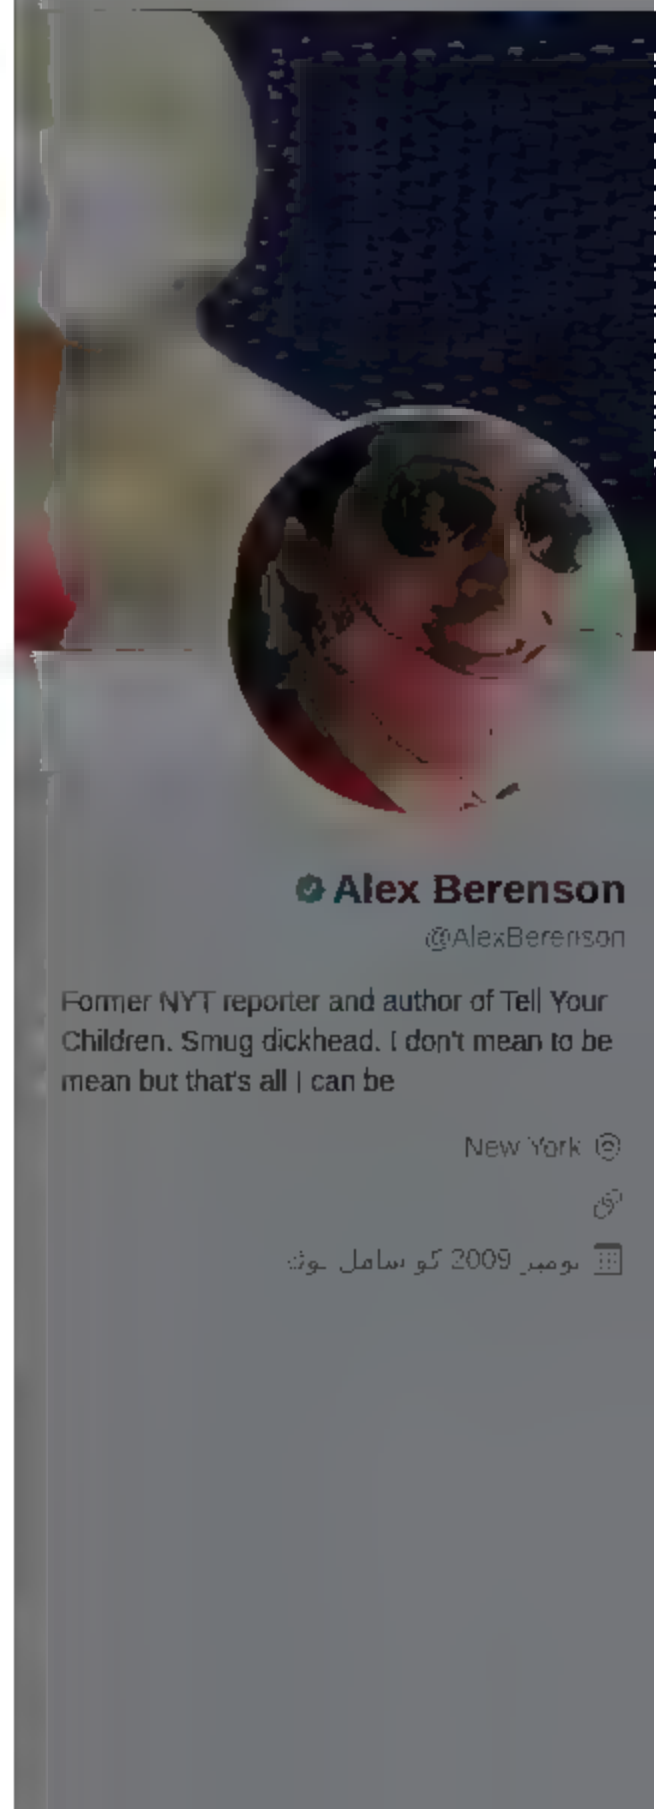
Hi Alex,



I saw your tweet regarding the 39 year old woman who died from a blood clot in her lung and who tested negative for COVID 19. I am concerned because my 28 year old daughter was in the ER this past week with a blood clot in her lung. She also tested negative for COVID 19 and has been inactive due to working from home in Indiana. She had no history of blood clots and was active (running) prior to the stay at home orders.
I wouldn't be surprised to hear of this occurring with others as well. I wonder if doctors are even aware of these occurrences.

Thanks for all you are doing!

Smart analysis suggesting US excess deaths will end in the 200-250K range this year, not the 350K+ from the @cdcgov's topline estimate, and well below reported #Covid deaths. And somewhere between 50-100K of those are likely lockdown related (it is very hard to know for sure)...

Officially, the CDC shows 335K excess deaths in 2020. But, something is very wrong with their baseline expected deaths. For some reason, they "expected" mortality to decline this year - after steadily increasing annually for the past decade:

Given what we know about who is really dying from #Covid and just how sick most of those people are, this strikes me as a reasonable estimate. Many, many of these folks would have died this year no matter what.

Florida again: People over 85 (not 75, 85) make up 1 in 3 of #COVID deaths statewide - 5x as many deaths as everyone under 55.

Put another way: if you are over 85, you have a 1 in 300 chance of dying of #COVID in Florida in the last five months.

Under 55? 1 in 33,000.

When the study began 6% had antibodies, indicating exposure.

By mid-summer 47% did. Half the population.

Not one person was hospitalized or died...

Many IgM antibody tests rapidly reverted to negative after being positive. So point-in-time antibody testing almost certainly UNDERESTIMATES exposure (which may be why it is so hard to get over 20% antibody positives in broad population studies)...

is therefore population-wide social distancing combined with home isolation of cases and school and university closure.

To avoid a rebound in transmission, these policies will need to be maintained until large stocks of vaccine are available to immunise the population – which could be 18 months or more. Adaptive hospital surveillance-based triggers for switching on and off population-wide social distancing and school closure offer greater robustness to uncertainty than fixed duration interventions and can be adapted for regional use (e.g. at the state level in the US). Given local epidemics are not perfectly synchronised, local policies are also more efficient and can achieve comparable levels of suppression to national policies while being in force for a slightly smaller proportion of the time. However, we estimate that for a national QI policy, social distancing would need to be in force for at least 2/3 of the time (for $R_0 = 2.4$, see Table 4) until a vaccine was available.

However, there are very large uncertainties around the transmission of this virus, the likely

Nice the @cdcgov is making it official but nothing new here - the serology tests have all said the same thing since April. IFR is far lower than case fatality ratio indicates.

Just wait until they hear about T-cells and herd immunity in Atlanta! It'll blow their minds.

Perhaps "unnerving" with respect to morbidity and long-term consequences. But the implications for the case fatality rate is to the contrary--shifting it potentially an order of magnitude lower. #COVID19 #coronavirus twitter.com/rickberke/stat…

Arizona: hospitalizations for Covid are now just over half the July 13 peak, positive tests have fallen similarly, and it looks like deaths are rolling too. A very hopeful sign for Texas and Florida, which just reported its lowest Tuesday-Saturday death figure in three weeks.

Remember yesterday, when I published an email asking about possible double-counting of cases in Arizona? And then the state said no, it wasn't double-counting.

Must just be coincidence that the number of #Covid hospitalizations fell 300 and ventilator use plunged 25% overnight.

Another pulmonary embolism case here - this of a 28-year-old woman (active before the lockdowns). Fortunately, she went to the ER and survived.

Hi Alex,

I saw your tweet regarding the 39 year old woman who died from a blood clot in her lung and who tested negative for COVID 19. I am concerned because my 28 year old daughter was in the ER this past week with a blood clot in her lung. She also tested negative for COVID 19 and has been inactive due to working from home in Indiana. She had no history of blood clots and was active (running) prior to the stay at home orders.
I wouldn't be surprised to hear of this occurring with others as well. I wonder if doctors are even aware of these occurrences.

Thanks for all you are doing!

Florida again: People over 85 (not 75, 85) make up 1 in 3 of #COVID deaths statewide - 5x as many deaths as everyone under 55.

Put another way: if you are over 85, you have a 1 in 300 chance of dying of #COVID in Florida in the last five months.

Under 55? 1 in 33,000.

BTW: Per [redacted], people 85 and over have about a 1 in 7 chance of dying annually from all causes.

This is why it's likely the excess mortality from [redacted] will be so hard to spot over the course of a year or more.

Universal Masking in Hospitals in the Covid-19 Era

Are scrambling to intensify their measures for protecting patients and health care workers from the virus. An increasing number of frontline providers are wondering whether this effort should include universal use of masks by all health care workers. Universal masking is already standard practice in Hong Kong, Singapore, and other parts of Asia and has recently been adopted by a handful of U.S. hospitals.

We know that wearing a mask outside health care facilities offers little, if any, protection from infection. Public health authorities define a significant exposure to Covid-19 as face-to-face contact within 6 feet with a patient with

You know why they don't need some of the beds?
You either get better or die quicker than anticipated.
Also, some deaths are people in hospice (no life saving) or care facilities who will never be brought to the hospital.
So the deaths are there, but not the hospitalizations.

Great news out of Georgia! This is from Emory, the most important hospital in Atlanta. Looks like the spike is over there too. Btw: it happened almost two months after Georgia ended its lockdown. See the connection? Me neither.

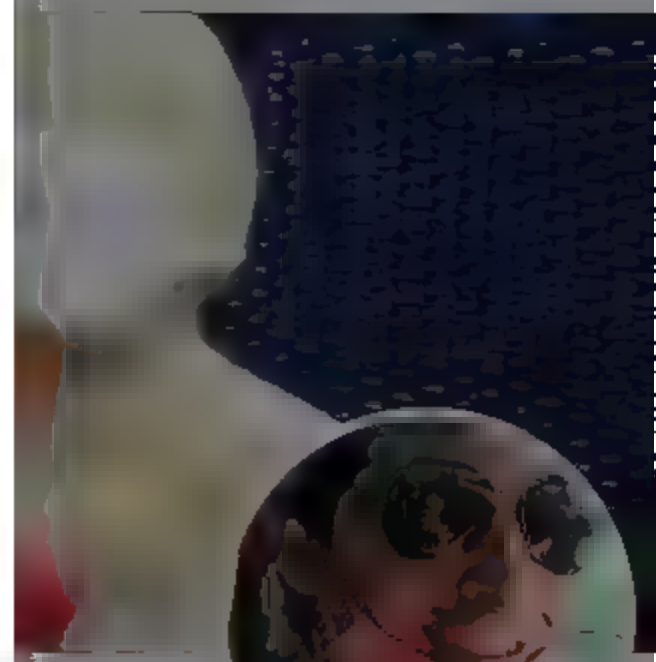
Hi Alex,

I saw your tweet regarding the 39 year old woman who died from a blood clot in her lung and who tested negative for COVID 19. I am concerned because my 28 year old daughter was in the ER this past week with a blood clot in her lung. She also tested negative for COVID 19 and has been inactive due to working from home in Indiana. She had no history of blood clots and was active (running) prior to the stay at home orders.
I wouldn't be surprised to hear of this occurring with others as well. I wonder if doctors are even aware of these occurrences.



Thanks for all you are doing!

While I agree with you in all of this, HCQ is not a fantasy. It's a cheap drug that is safe and has been around for over 60 years. Say it doesn't work, fine. But big pharma leading the charge to call it DANGEROUS, doesn't give you pause? Why would they do that?

1/ Please, Kadhim, show me where the report says fewer than 20,000 people might die with weeks instead of 18 months of “suppression”? The entire point of the report was that short-term measures wouldn’t work, which is exactly why it terrified people so much.

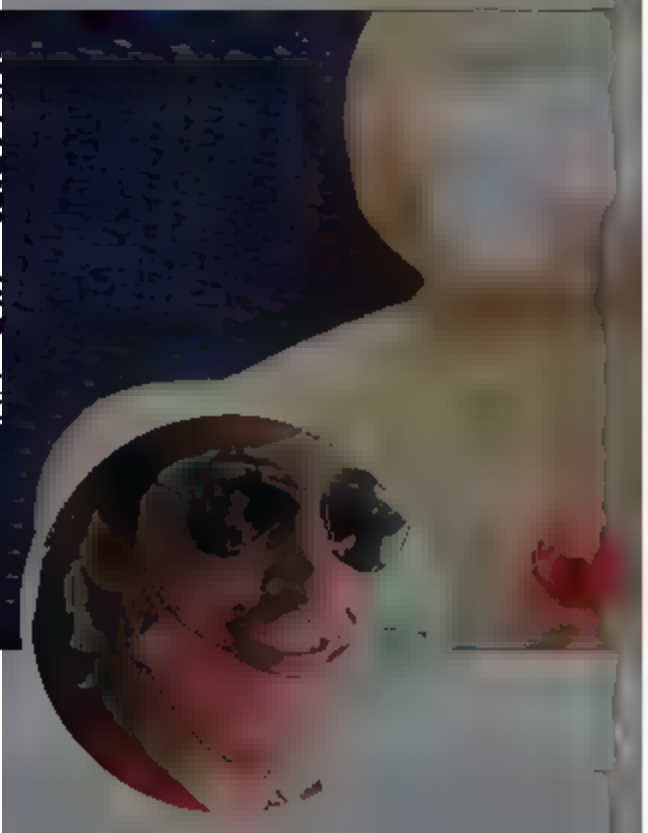
2/ In fact, the report says explicitly that “the initial duration of measures... will be several months.”



16 March 2020 Imperial College COVID-19 Response Team

is therefore population-wide social distancing combined with home isolation of cases and school and university closure.

To avoid a rebound in transmission, these policies will need to be maintained until large stocks of vaccine are available to immunise the population – which could be 18 months or more. Adaptive hospital surveillance-based triggers for switching on and off population-wide social distancing and school closure offer greater robustness to uncertainty than fixed duration interventions and can be adapted for regional use (e.g. at the state level in the US). Given local epidemics are not perfectly synchronised, local policies are also more efficient and can achieve comparable levels of suppression to national policies while being in force for a slightly smaller proportion of the time. However, we estimate that for a national QII policy, social distancing would need to be in force for at least 2/3 of the time (for $R_0 = 2.4$, see Table 4) until a vaccine was available.

However, there are very large uncertainties around the transmission of this virus, the likely

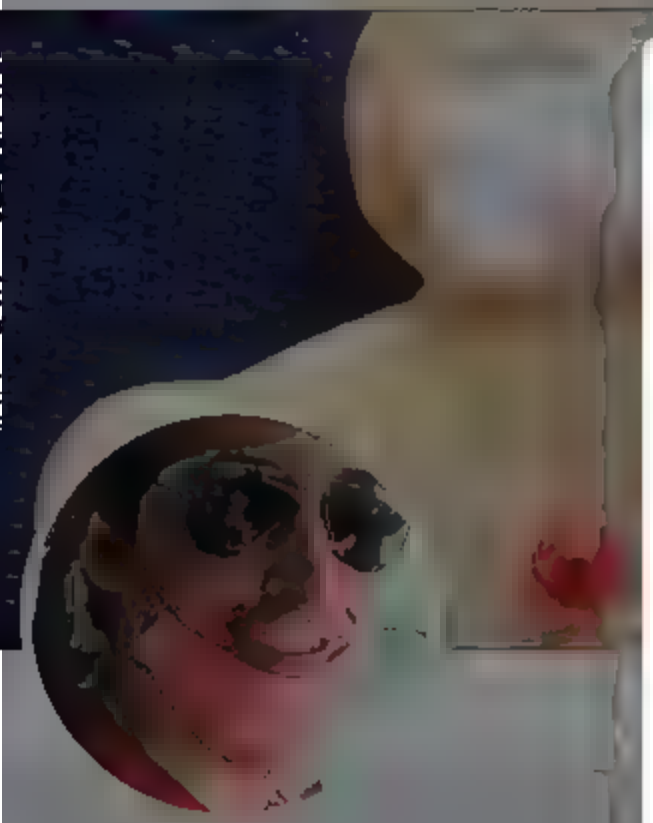
Remember yesterday, when I published an email asking about possible double-counting of cases in Arizona? And then the state said no, it wasn't double-counting.



Must just be coincidence that the number of #Covid hospitalizations fell 300 and ventilator use plunged 25% overnight.

While I agree with you in all of this, HCQ is not a fantasy. It's a cheap drug that is safe and has been around for over 60 years. Say it doesn't work, fine. But big pharma leading the charge to call it DANGEROUS, doesn't give you pause? Why would they do that?

Nice the @cdcgov is making it official but nothing new here - the serology tests have all said the same thing since April. IFR is far lower than case fatality ratio indicates.

Just wait until they hear about T-cells and herd immunity in Atlanta! It'll blow their minds.

You know why they don't need some of the beds?
You either get better or die quicker than anticipated.
Also, some deaths are people in hospice (no life saving) or care facilities who will never be brought to the hospital.
So the deaths are there, but not the hospitalizations.

Are scrambling to intensify their measures for protecting patients and health care workers from the virus. An increasing number of frontline providers are wondering whether this effort should include universal use of masks by all health care workers. Universal masking is already standard practice in Hong Kong, Singapore, and other parts of Asia and has recently been adopted by a handful of U.S. hospitals.

We know that wearing a mask outside health care facilities offers little, if any, protection from infection. Public health authorities define a significant exposure to Covid-19 as face-to-face contact within 6 feet with a patient with

While I agree with you in all of this, HCQ is not a fantasy. It's a cheap drug that is safe and has been around for over 60 years. Say it doesn't work, fine. But big pharma leading the charge to call it DANGEROUS, doesn't give you pause? Why would they do that?

HCQ is a great prophylactic and the Zelenko cocktail works well when administered early on.

Great news out of Georgia! This is from Emory, the most important hospital in Atlanta. Looks like the spike is over there too. Btw: it happened almost two months after Georgia ended its lockdown. See the connection? Me neither.

So the projections on the left were wrong but the hospitals are still out of total beds and ICU beds? Am I reading this correctly?

You are not. Hospitals have added beds and ICU beds, which is why the overflow is ~empty.

The projection claims 718 ICU beds available. The data says -3700 currently in ICU. Haven't heard of some massive shortage of ICU beds...what's up with the ICU beds available number in the model?

Hospitals furloughing staff as well. My entire state is on stay-at-home for less than 400 cases, 60 hospitalized and 3 deaths. Unfkingbelievable.

Dara @daratancredi · 3 Apr

You know why they don't need some of the beds?
You either get better or die quicker than anticipated.
Also, some deaths are people in hospice (no life saving) or care facilities who will never be brought to the hospital.
So the deaths are there, but not the hospitalizations.

Article

Are scrambling to intensify their measures for protecting patients and health care workers from the virus. An increasing number of frontline providers are wondering whether this effort should include universal use of masks by all health care workers. Universal masking is already standard practice in Hong Kong, Singapore, and other parts of Asia and has recently been adopted by a handful of U.S. hospitals.

We know that wearing a mask outside health care facilities offers little, if any, protection from infection. Public health authorities define a significant exposure to Covid-19 as face-to-face contact within 6 feet with a patient with Nice the @cdcgov is making it official but nothing new here - the serology tests have all said the same thing since April. IFR is far lower than case fatality ratio indicates.

Just wait until they hear about T-cells and herd immunity in Atlanta! It'll blow their minds.

Many IgM antibody tests rapidly reverted to negative after being positive. So point-in-time antibody testing almost certainly UNDERESTIMATES exposure (which may be why it is so hard to get over 20% antibody positives in broad population studies)...

So the projections on the left were wrong but the hospitals are still out of total beds and ICU beds? Am I reading this correctly?

You are not. Hospitals have added beds and ICU beds, which is why the overflow is ~empty.

The projection claims 718 ICU beds available. The data says ~3700 currently in ICU. Haven't heard of some massive shortage of ICU beds...what's up with the ICU beds available number in the model?

Hospitals furloughing staff as well. My entire state is on stay-at-home for less than 400 cases, 60 hospitalized and 3 deaths. Unfkingbelievable.

You know why they don't need some of the beds?
You either get better or die quicker than anticipated.
Also, some deaths are people in hospice (no life saving) or care facilities who will never be brought to the hospital.
So the deaths are there, but not the hospitalizations.

Hi Alex,

I saw your tweet regarding the 39 year old woman who died from a blood clot in her lung and who tested negative for COVID 19. I am concerned because my 28 year old daughter was in the ER this past week with a blood clot in her lung. She also tested negative for COVID 19 and has been inactive due to working from home in Indiana. She had no history of blood clots and was active (running) prior to the stay at home orders.
I wouldn't be surprised to hear of this occurring with others as well. I wonder if doctors are even aware of these occurrences.

Thanks for all you are doing!

Remember yesterday, when I published an email asking about possible double-counting of cases in Arizona? And then the state said no, it wasn't double-counting.

Must just be coincidence that the number of #Covid hospitalizations fell 300 and ventilator use plunged 25% overnight.

Nice the @cdcgov is making it official but nothing new here - the serology tests have all said the same thing since April. IFR is far lower than case fatality ratio indicates.

Just wait until they hear about T-cells and herd immunity in Atlanta! It'll blow their minds.

Just don't talk about HCQ. It makes you sound like a fantasist.

We don't need fantasies of a pill that will save us from the apocalypse; we need a calm explanation of the non-apocalyptic realities here, how we're managing them, and how if we've learned anything in the last four months it's that we CAN and WILL handle this.

While I agree with you in all of this, HCQ is not a fantasy. It's a cheap drug that is safe and has been around for over 60 years. Say it doesn't work, fine. But big pharma leading the charge to call it DANGEROUS, doesn't give you pause? Why would they do that?

Arizona: hospitalizations for Covid are now just over half the July 13 peak, positive tests have fallen similarly, and it looks like deaths are rolling too. A very hopeful sign for Texas and Florida, which just reported its lowest Tuesday-Saturday death figure in three weeks.

Florida again: People over 85 (not 75, 85) make up 1 in 3 of #COVID deaths statewide - 5x as many deaths as everyone under 55.

Put another way: if you are over 85, you have a 1 in 300 chance of dying of #COVID in Florida in the last five months.

Under 55? 1 in 33,000.

BTW: Per , people 85 and over have about a 1 in 7 chance of dying annually from all causes.

This is why it's likely the excess mortality from will be so hard to spot over the course of a year or more.

1/ Please, Kadhim, show me where the report says fewer than 20,000 people might die with weeks instead of 18 months of "suppression"? The entire point of the report was that short-term measures wouldn't work, which is exactly why it terrified people so much.

is therefore population-wide social distancing combined with home isolation of cases and school and university closure.

To avoid a rebound in transmission, these policies will need to be maintained until large stocks of vaccine are available to immunise the population – which could be 18 months or more. Adaptive hospital surveillance-based triggers for switching on and off population-wide social distancing and school closure offer greater robustness to uncertainty than fixed duration interventions and can be adapted for regional use (e.g. at the state level in the US). Given local epidemics are not perfectly synchronised, local policies are also more efficient and can achieve comparable levels of suppression to national policies while being in force for a slightly smaller proportion of the time. However, we estimate that for a national GB policy, social distancing would need to be in force for at least 2/3 of the time (for R_0=2.4, see Table 4) until a vaccine was available.

However, there are very large uncertainties around the transmission of this virus, the likely

Just FYI, first chart is ICU beds, down over 30% from peak July 18, second is general beds, down over 40% from peak July 15. Almost exactly like Arizona. Team Apocalypse can't catch a break.

Hi Alex,

I saw your tweet regarding the 39 year old woman who died from a blood clot in her lung and who tested negative for COVID 19. I am concerned because my 28 year old daughter was in the ER this past week with a blood clot in her lung. She also tested negative for COVID 19 and has been inactive due to working from home in Indiana. She had no history of blood clots and was active (running) prior to the stay at home orders.
I wouldn't be surprised to hear of this occurring with others as well. I wonder if doctors are even aware of these occurrences.

Thanks for all you are doing!

Arizona: hospitalizations for Covid are now just over half the July 13 peak, positive tests have fallen similarly, and it looks like deaths are rolling too. A very hopeful sign for Texas and Florida, which just reported its lowest Tuesday-Saturday death figure in three weeks.

Many IgM antibody tests rapidly reverted to negative after being positive. So point-in-time antibody testing almost certainly UNDERESTIMATES exposure (which may be why it is so hard to get over 20% antibody positives in broad population studies)...

Hospitals are scrambling to intensify their measures for protecting patients and health care workers from the virus. An increasing number of frontline providers are wondering whether this effort should include universal use of masks by all health care workers. Universal masking is already standard practice in Hong Kong, Singapore, and other parts of Asia and has recently been adopted by a handful of U.S. hospitals.

We know that wearing a mask outside health care facilities offers little, if any, protection from infection. Public health authorities define a significant exposure to Covid-19 as face-to-face contact within 6 feet with a patient with symptomatic Covid-19 that is sustained for a

So I'm watching a few minutes of television - a sin I've avoided the last month, been a bit busy reporting, amassing data - and I am struck by yet another reason we need to stay grounded in reality here, need to remind ourselves these lockdowns must end as soon as possible...

We don't need fantasies of a pill that will save us from the apocalypse; we need a calm explanation of the non-apocalyptic realities here, how we're managing them, and how if we've learned anything in the last four months it's that we CAN and WILL handle this.

While I agree with you in all of this, HCQ is not a fantasy. It's a cheap drug that is safe and has been around for over 60 years. Say it doesn't work, fine. But big pharma leading the charge to call it DANGEROUS, doesn't give you pause? Why would they do that?

Must just be coincidence that the number of #Covid hospitalizations fell 300 and ventilator use plunged 25% overnight.

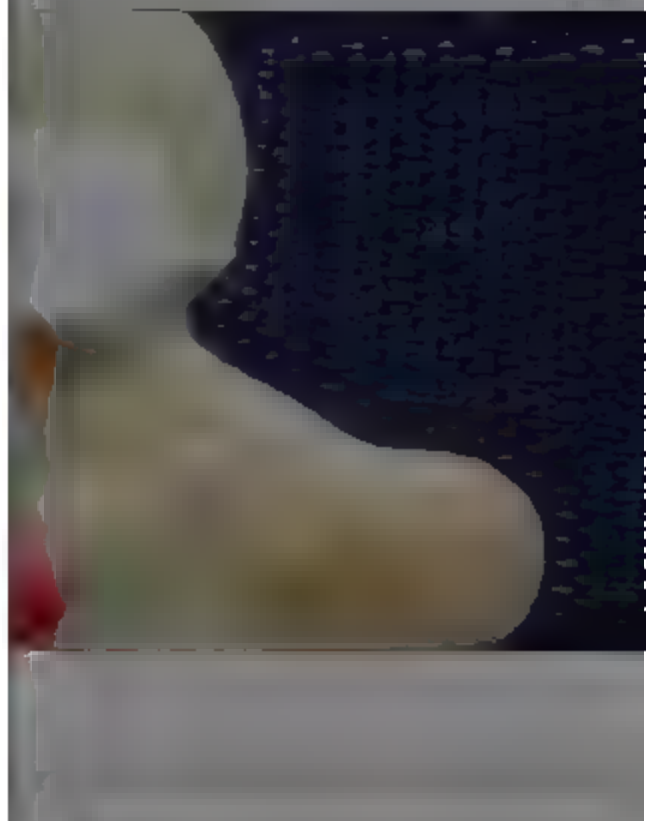
Hi Alex,



I saw your tweet regarding the 39 year old woman who died from a blood clot in her lung and who tested negative for COVID 19. I am concerned because my 28 year old daughter was in the ER this past week with a blood clot in her lung. She also tested negative for COVID 19 and has been inactive due to working from home in Indiana. She had no history of blood clots and was active (running) prior to the stay at home orders.
I wouldn't be surprised to hear of this occurring with others as well. I wonder if doctors are even aware of these occurrences.

Thanks for all you are doing!

1/ Please, Kadhim, show me where the report says fewer than 20,000 people might die with weeks instead of 18 months of “suppression”? The entire point of the report was that short-term measures wouldn’t work, which is exactly why it terrified people so much.

@kadhim kadhim (ˆ –^)ノ
The misinformation, most notably peddled by @AlexBerenson as well as the Washington Examiner and Daily Caller, is a total misrepresentation of what Professor Neil Ferguson said at a UK parliamentary committee hearing on Wednesday.

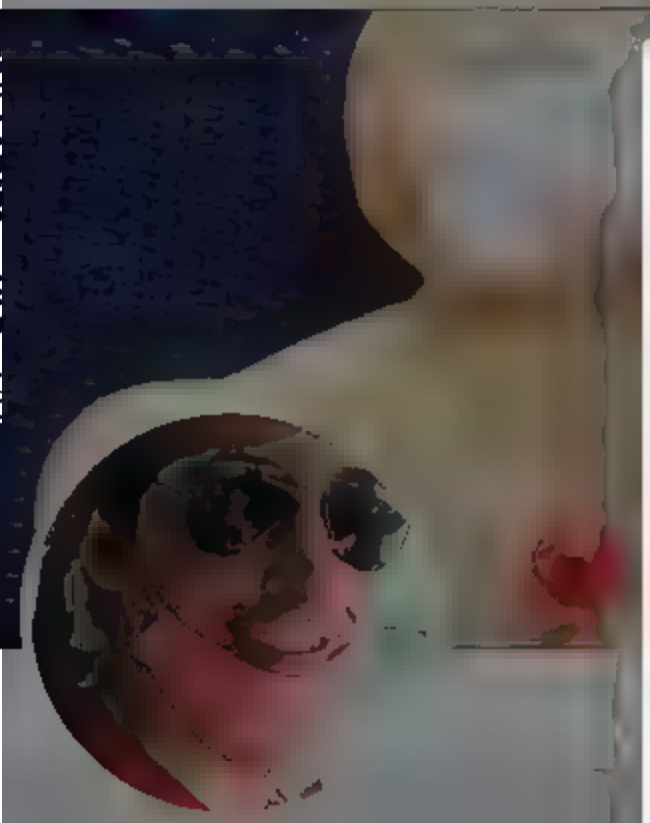
is therefore population-wide social distancing combined with home isolation of cases and school and university closure.

To avoid a rebound in transmission, these policies will need to be maintained until large stocks of vaccine are available to immunise the population – which could be 18 months or more. Adaptive hospital surveillance-based triggers for switching on and off population-wide social distancing and school closure offer greater robustness to uncertainty than fixed duration interventions and can be adapted for regional use (e.g. at the state level in the US). Given local epidemics are not perfectly synchronised, local policies are also more efficient and can achieve comparable levels of suppression to national policies while being in force for a slightly smaller proportion of the time. However, we estimate that for a national GB policy, social distancing would need to be in force for at least 2/3 of the time (for $R_0 = 2.4$, say (also 4) until a vaccine was available.



However, there are very large uncertainties around the transmission of this virus, the likely

So the projections on the left were wrong but the hospitals are still out of total beds and ICU beds? Am I reading this correctly?

You are not. Hospitals have added beds and ICU beds, which is why the overflow is ~empty.

The projection claims 718 ICU beds available. The data says -3700 currently in ICU. Haven't heard of some massive shortage of ICU beds...what's up with the ICU beds available number in the model?

Hospitals furloughing staff as well. My entire state is on stay-at-home for less than 400 cases, 60 hospitalized and 3 deaths. Unfkingbelievable.

Dara @daratancredi · 3. апр

You know why they don't need some of the beds?
You either get better or die quicker than anticipated.
Also, some deaths are people in hospice (no life saving) or care facilities who will never be brought to the hospital.
So the deaths are there, but not the hospitalizations.

Great news out of Georgia! This is from Emory, the most important hospital in Atlanta. Looks like the spike is over there too. Btw: it happened almost two months after Georgia ended its lockdown. See the connection? Me neither.

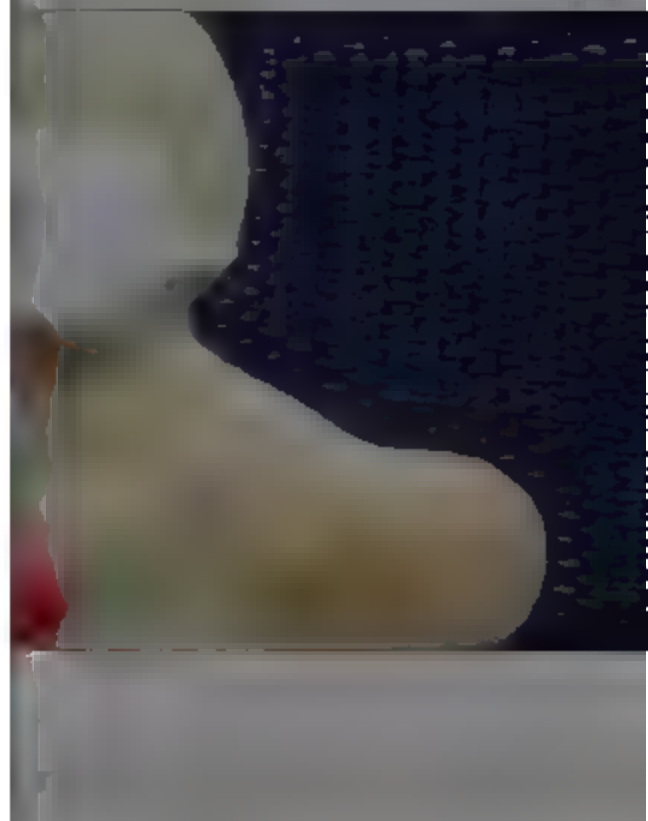
Hi Alex,

I saw your tweet regarding the 39 year old woman who died from a blood clot in her lung and who tested negative for COVID 19. I am concerned because my 28 year old daughter was in the ER this past week with a blood clot in her lung. She also tested negative for COVID 19 and has been inactive due to working from home in Indiana. She had no history of blood clots and was active (running) prior to the stay at home orders.
I wouldn't be surprised to hear of this occurring with others as well. I wonder if doctors are even aware of these occurrences.



Thanks for all you are doing!

Arizona: hospitalizations for Covid are now just over half the July 13 peak, positive tests have fallen similarly, and it looks like deaths are rolling too. A very hopeful sign for Texas and Florida, which just reported its lowest Tuesday-Saturday death figure in three weeks.

In fact, there's an almost unanswerable argument here about how to code these deaths in people who are really sick - does blaming the coronavirus or the flu (or anything else) for the death of someone who would have died in a few days from a severe underlying illness make sense?

Great new NY state data: (hospitalizations tend to rise some on Mondays, but the trend is still clear). Net intubations rose by less than 100, down 80% since Friday! A fantastic day for reality, a terrible day for Team Apocalypse.

Many IgM antibody tests rapidly reverted to negative after being positive. So point-in-time antibody testing almost certainly UNDERESTIMATES exposure (which may be why it is so hard to get over 20% antibody positives in broad population studies)...

Universal Masking in Hospitals in the Covid-19 Era

Article

Hospitals are scrambling to intensify their measures for protecting patients and health care workers from the virus. An increasing number of frontline providers are wondering whether this effort should include universal use of masks by all health care workers. Universal masking is already standard practice in Hong Kong, Singapore, and other parts of Asia and has recently been adopted by a handful of U.S. hospitals.

We know that wearing a mask outside health care facilities offers little, if any, protection from infection. Public health authorities define a significant exposure to Covid-19 as face-to-face contact within 6 feet with a patient with symptomatic Covid-19 that is sustained for a

Arizona: hospitalizations for Covid are now just over half the July 13 peak, positive tests have fallen similarly, and it looks like deaths are rolling too. A very hopeful sign for Texas and Florida, which just reported its lowest Tuesday-Saturday death figure in three weeks.

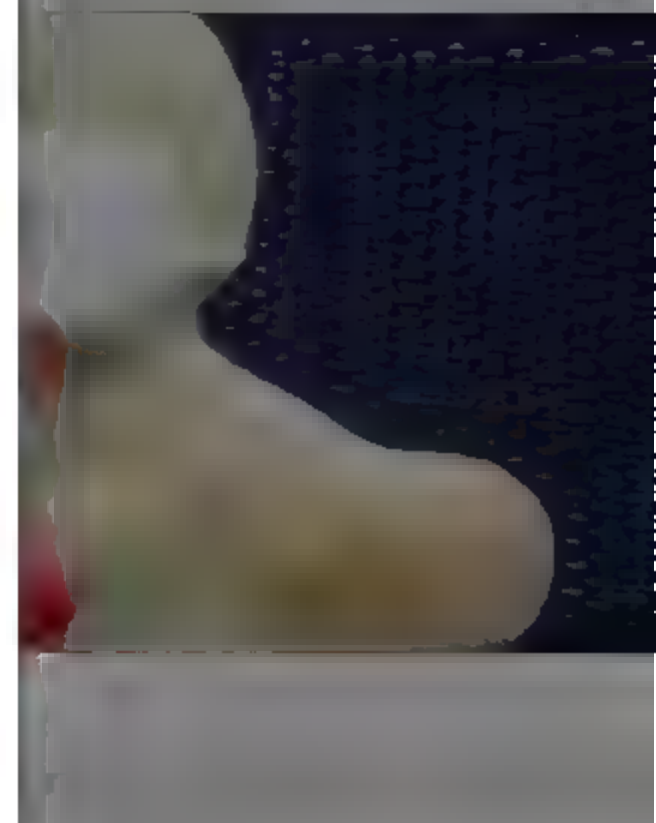
Hi Alex,



I saw your tweet regarding the 39 year old woman who died from a blood clot in her lung and who tested negative for COVID 19. I am concerned because my 28 year old daughter was in the ER this past week with a blood clot in her lung. She also tested negative for COVID 19 and has been inactive due to working from home in Indiana. She had no history of blood clots and was active (running) prior to the stay at home orders.
I wouldn't be surprised to hear of this occurring with others as well. I wonder if doctors are even aware of these occurrences.

Thanks for all you are doing!

Remember yesterday, when I published an email asking about possible double-counting of cases in Arizona? And then the state said no, it wasn't double-counting.

Must just be coincidence that the number of #Covid hospitalizations fell 300 and ventilator use plunged 25% overnight.

is therefore population-wide social distancing combined with home isolation of cases and school and university closure.

To avoid a rebound in transmission, these policies will need to be maintained until large stocks of vaccine are available to immunise the population – which could be 18 months or more. Adaptive hospital surveillance-based triggers for switching on and off population-wide social distancing and school closure offer greater robustness to uncertainty than fixed duration interventions and can be adapted for regional use (e.g. at the state level in the US). Given local epidemics are not perfectly synchronised, local policies are also more efficient and can achieve comparable levels of suppression to national policies while being in force for a slightly smaller proportion of the time. However, we estimate that for a national GB policy, social distancing would need to be in force for at least 2/3 of the time (for R_0=2.4, see Table 4) until a vaccine was available.

However, there are very large uncertainties around the transmission of this virus, the likely

Universal Masking in Hospitals in the Covid-19 Era

Article

Hospitals are scrambling to intensify their measures for protecting patients and health care workers from the virus. An increasing number of frontline providers are wondering whether this effort should include universal use of masks by all health care workers. Universal masking is already standard practice in Hong Kong, Singapore, and other parts of Asia and has recently been adopted by a handful of U.S. hospitals.

We know that wearing a mask outside health care facilities offers little, if any, protection from infection. Public health authorities define a significant exposure to Covid-19 as face-to-face contact within 6 feet with a patient with symptomatic Covid-19 that is sustained for a

While I agree with you in all of this, HCQ is not a fantasy. It's a cheap drug that is safe and has been around for over 60 years. Say it doesn't work, fine. But big pharma leading the charge to call it DANGEROUS, doesn't give you pause? Why would they do that?

Remember yesterday, when I published an email asking about possible double-counting of cases in Arizona? And then the state said no, it wasn't double-counting.

Must just be coincidence that the number of #Covid hospitalizations fell 300 and ventilator use plunged 25% overnight.

You either get better or die quicker than anticipated.
Also, some deaths are people in hospice (no life saving) or care facilities who will never be brought to the hospital.
So the deaths are there, but not the hospitalizations.

By mid-summer 47% did. Half the population.

Many IgM antibody tests rapidly reverted to negative after being positive. So point-in-time antibody testing almost certainly UNDERESTIMATES exposure (which may be why it is so hard to get over 20% antibody positives in broad population studies)...

is therefore population-wide social distancing combined with home isolation of cases and school and university closure.

To avoid a rebound in transmission, these policies will need to be maintained until large stocks of vaccine are available to immunise the population – which could be 18 months or more. Adaptive hospital surveillance-based triggers for switching on and off population-wide social distancing and school closure offer greater robustness to uncertainty than fixed duration interventions and can be adapted for regional use (e.g. at the state level in the US). Given local epidemics are not perfectly synchronised, local policies are also more efficient and can achieve comparable levels of suppression to national policies while being in force for a slightly smaller proportion of the time. However, we estimate that for a national GB policy, social distancing would need to be in force for at least 2/3 of the time (for R_0=2.4, see Table 4) until a vaccine was available.

However, there are very large uncertainties around the transmission of this virus, the likely
